Red Shock Forces Hit Nazis Hard

By The Canadian Press

Russian shock troops, attacking with gun butts and bayonets, were reported driving the Germans from house after house amid the nightmare wreckage of Stalingrad today, and once again it appeared the astonishing Soviets had warded off disaster. It was the 39th day of siege.

A bulletin from Nazi field headquarters asserted that German troops had captured suburban Orlocka, in the northwest section of Stalingrad, and claimed the encirclement of a major Soviet force to the west of this centre.

Soviet dispatches declared the Germans gained only 200 or 300 yards in the northwest suburbs, losing nearly 1,000 dead.

The Nazi high command said new Russian assaults against the German barrier north of the city had been repulsed with a loss yesterday of 124 Soviet tanks.

RALLY TO CALL

Rallying to Premier Stalin's call to "stand firm," the Red armies were pictured in dispatches as stemming the Nazi assault in the heart of the city and scoring gains on both flanks of the beleaguered Volga metropolis.

Fresh German divisions brought from other fronts were reported rusaing into the struggle, but the Russians said a decisive turn had not yet been reached.

Soviet accounts said the battle now raged in four main zones of the sprawling industrial centre: inner city, southwest, northwest suburbs, and along a 40-mile northwestern corridor between the Don and Volga rivers.

Heavy German casualties were also reported in fighting south of Novorossisk, on the Black Sea coast; and near Leningrad.

Rent Control Prosecutions Launched Here

First prosecutions for evasion of rental control regulations in Edmonton were launched Friday morning by officers of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Harold O'Connor, K.C., has been appointed agent for the department of justice to conduct the prosecutions.

Informations and complaints were laid Friday by Joseph M. Lauerman, inspector for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, against Wallace Thomas, Mrs. F. Latimer and Mrs. Vera Madill for unlawfully charging, demanding, receiving or collecting for real property consisting of housing accommodation a rental in excess of the maximum rental fixed for such housing accommodation by orders of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board under authority of order-in-council P.C. 9029.

OTHER CASES

In addition to the rental control evasion charge, Mrs. Madill is facing also a charge of unlawfully dispossessing or evicting a tenant of the housing accommodation known as 10037 107 street, by making a false or misleading statement in a notice to vacate contrary to Wartime Prices and Trade Board regulations.

The charges against Mr. Thomas are laid in connection with rental charged on a property situated at 10616 84 avenue, and against Mrs. Latimer in connection with a property at 10742 104 street.

The informations and complaints were sworn to in connection with the summonses, returnable on Oct. 6 in police court, will be served Friday afternoon.

Smash Bridge on Jap Supply Line

By The Canadian Press

Japanese troops retreated deeper into the jungles of the Owen Stanley mountains in New Guinea today, cautiously pursued by Australian forces on the alert for a possible ambush.

A bulletin from Allied headquarters said the Australians now were approaching Menari, a mountain hamlet 46 miles north of Port Moresby, where it was believed the Japanese might attempt to make a stand.

Menari lies four miles beyond Nauro, a ridge-top village which the Australians captured Wednesday after a 10-mile advance in 24 hours.

Meanwhile, Allied planes, including Flying Fortresses, pounded Japanese bases at Salamaua and Buna, on the New Guinea east coast, and strafed Japanese troops along the mountain trails.

No further word was forthcoming from the Solomon Islands, where United States marines last were reported mopping up Japanese troops on Guadalcanal island.

Today's War Moves

By FREDERICK OESCHNER
British United Press Central European Manager

Adolf Hitler's order of the day to the German troops outside Stalingrad, reportedly issued Wednesday evening following his speech, probably will add fury and weight to the Nazi attack.

As profuse as Hitler, Goering, Ribbentrop and Goebbels may be in their propaganda exhortations to armed forces and public to increase their war effort, Der Fuehrer never has been lavish with orders of the day.

Usually they have accompanied only major military operations

Reach Ship Goal

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—(AP)—The Maritime Commission announced yesterday that United States shipyards had reached their promised goal of three ships a day by delivering 93 new cargo vessels with a deadweight tonnage of 1,009,800 in September.

By JOHN REICHMANN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—(BUP)—Heavy army bombers and United States submarines have sunk or damaged 12 more Japanese ships in the far-ranging battle of the Pacific, navy, communiques disclosed today.

Army bombers hit two transports near Kiska, Japanese base in the Aleutians; damaged and probably sank a submarine, and bombed and strafed a cargo ship.

In Far Eastern waters, submarines sent to the bottom a large seaplane tender, a large cargo-passenger ship, a large freighter and two medium-sized cargo ships. They also damaged and probably sank the medium-sized cargo ships and a large tanker.

LIBERATORS USED

Disclosing that army liberator bombers—huge four-motored B-24's—are now operating in the Aleutian area, the navy said the army craft carried out four raids on Sept. 27 and 28 on the Kiska area and a fifth attack on Attu, another on the western Aleutian Islands.

The enemy now has suffered these total shipping losses in the Aleutians alone: 13 sunk, 3 probably sunk and 21 damaged for a total of 37 ships.

At least six Jap Zero planes were shot down in the Aleutian raids, against only one United States pursuit ship lost.

First of the Aleutian attacks reported today was on Sept. 27 when the army liberators bombed enemy ships and installations at Kiska. One Zero fighter was shot down.

On the same day, three army bombers caught a transport escorted by a destroyer near Attu. Near misses damaged the transport, the Navy reported, and apparently forced the ship to stop.

Early on the following morning, a strong force of army heavy bombers, protected by fighters, again attacked enemy ships and buildings at Kiska. Zero fighters and anti-aircraft batteries both ashore and afloat sought to drive the Americans off. Several planes of transport and a submarine were damaged and probably sunk and five enemy fighters were shot down.

That afternoon—Sept. 28—army bombers returned to the attack on Kiska, strafing and bombing ships and shore facilities, but the results of this attack were not discerned. During the same afternoon army planes bombed and strafed an enemy cargo ship northwest of Kiska.

The newest submarine toll brought to 115 the total number of Japanese vessels sunk, probably sunk or damaged by U.S. submersibles. Of these, 74 were listed as sunk, 19 probably sunk and 22 damaged.

NEW FIGHTER PLANE IS SAID BEST YET MADE

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Sydney Camm, designer of the famous Hurricane fighting plane, one of Britain's leading air weapons, has fathered another fighter, the Typhoon, which was pictured today as superior even to the celebrated Spitfire.

The Typhoon was reported to be a decisive retort to Germany's bid for air superiority in the Focke-Wulf 190.

The Typhoon, a single-engined plane unofficially credited with a speed of more than 400 miles an hour, like the Spitfire, still is on the secret list. Its existence was mentioned publicly for the first time last April, but the extent of its production and use is unknown. It is armed with machine guns and cannon, and is said to have an amazing climbing ability.

Canadian Heroes Honored

Canada's army, which has had little opportunity for offensive action due to its role as a defender of Britain since the dark days of Dunkerque, has now produced the first Canadian Victoria Cross winner of the Second Great War. The hero thus honored is Lt.-Col Cecil Merritt, of Vancouver, and The Bulletin today carries a full page of pictures of him and his family on Page 18. A total of 178 Canadians received decorations in a list of honors released by the National Defence Department today and this list will be found on Page 9.

Ottawa Plans Jobs For All When War Ends

SEIGNIORY CLUB, Que., Oct. 2.—(CP)—J. Gray Turgeon, Liberal member of parliament for Cariboo and chairman of the house of commons committee on post-war reconstruction, said here yesterday the object of the group is to assure full employment in Canada after the war.

Addressing a session of the annual convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Turgeon said he had solicited political leaders in Ottawa for "thoughts" on post-war Canada to give to the chamber.

TWO MILLION JOBS

Pensions Minister MacKenzie told him when the war was over 40 per cent of men and women employed in the armed forces and in war industry would need employment. The minister added that this meant that perhaps 2,000,000 Canadians would be looking for work and they would not sit idly by waiting for work to come to them.

"That time has gone forever," the minister told Mr. Turgeon.

Hon. R. B. Hanson, Conservative house leader, said the thought he would like to leave with the meeting was that there must be social and economic security in the post-war world. If private enterprise could not provide this security, then government would have to intervene.

SEES WEAKNESS

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said he feared the exercise of control by men not responsible to parliament would weaken the authority of parliament and perhaps render it useless altogether.

Mr. Turgeon urged colaboration between management and labor and said that many of the labor problems of today were the result of Labor having lost confidence in industrialists and political leaders.

V. C. Winner

Lt.-Col. C. C. I. Merritt, of Vancouver, whose bravery and inspiring leadership in the great Canadian-led raid on Dieppe won for him the Victoria Cross, the Empire's highest award for valor, it was announced from Ottawa today.

Sharp-Shooting Westerner Wins Victoria Cross

OTTAWA, Oct. 2. — (CP) — A sharp-shooting, grenade-throwing lawyer from Vancouver, Lt.-Col. Charles Cecil Merritt, is the first Canadian to win the Victoria Cross in the Second Great War.

Defence Minister Ralston today placed Col. Merritt's name at the head of a list of 178 Canadians who fought with the gallantry which calls for distinction in the battle of Dieppe.

Col. Merritt is a prisoner of war and is believed slightly wounded. He will not be able to collect his award personally, for a time at least, but his wife at Belleville, Ont., and his mother at Vancouver, in the midst of worry over his safety, were thrilled at the fact that his bravery was recognized by bestowal of the empire's highest award for gallantry.

HERE IS CITATION

Here is the citation accompanying the award:

"For matchless gallantry and inspiring leadership whilst commanding his battalion during the Dieppe raid Aug. 19, 1942. From the point of landing his unit's advance had to be made across a bridge in Pourville which was swept by very heavy machine-gun, mortar and artillery fire and the first parties were mostly destroyed and the bridge thickly covered by their bodies.

"A daring lead was required. Waving his helmet Lt-Col. Merritt rushed forward shouting 'Come on over. There is nothing to worry about here.' He thus personally led the survivors of at least four parties in turn across the bridge. Quickly organizing these he led them forward and when held up by enemy pill boxes he again headed rushes which succeeded in clearing them. In one case he himself destroyed the occupants of the post by throwing grenades into it.

"After several of his runners became casualties, he himself kept contact with his different positions. Although twice wounded, Lt.-Col. Merritt continued to direct the unit's operations with great vigor and determination and while organizing the withdrawal he stalked a sniper with a Bren gun and silenced him. He then coolly gave orders for the departure and announced his intention to hold off and get even with the enemy.

"When last seen he was collecting Bren and tommy guns and preparing a defensive position which successfully covered the

Bravery of Canada's Soldiers at Dieppe Officially Recognized

By FRANK FLAHERTY

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—(CP)—The bravery of Canada's troops in August's bloody battle of Dieppe today received official recognition from the King—178 awards including a Victoria Cross.

Lt.-Col. Cecil Merritt of Vancouver, who led the South Saskatchewan regiment in the attack and now is wounded and a prisoner of war, was singled out for the Empire's highest recognition of valor. His is the first Victoria Cross won by a Canadian since hostilities began.

Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts of Vancouver, commander of the Canadian force which stormed into the French coast town, and Brig. Churchill Mann of Toronto, his second-in-command, were two of 12 Canadian officers awarded the Distinguished Service Order.

Twelve Distinguished Conduct Medals also were included in the list.

Lance-Sergeant Wins D.C.M.

One went to Lance-Sergeant George A. Hickson of Kitchener, Ont. His name was previously coupled with Col. Merritt's when Defence Minister Ralston issued an official summary of the combined operations raid against the German-held town of Dieppe. Col. Ralston named these two men in citing two outstanding cases of the bravery he said was typical of all Canadians sent across the narrow English Channel.

The official recognition of bravery afforded by the decoration, said Prime Minister Mackenzie King, "will be but a part of the larger recognition which now has added the name 'Dieppe' to the imperishable list of battle honors of Canadian forces."

Col. Merritt was the man who waved his helmet to encourage his men as he led them across a bullet-swept bridge. L. Sgt. Hickson attached himself to an infantry platoon, took command when its officers were put out of action and blasted a way into the strongly-fortified Casino on the heights overlooking the approaches to the French summer resort town.

The Military Cross went to 16 officers and the Military Medal to 45 non-commissioned officers and men, while 24 officers and 68 other ranks were mentioned in dispatches.

The Dieppe operation, when some 5,000 Canadian troops made the first large-scale landing by Allied force on an enemy-defended European coast in the second Great War and suffered more than 3,350 casualties, gave the Canadian army a chance to share in the distribution of awards in which the air force and the navy have already participated due to the far-flung operations.

It was the second hard battle in which the Canadian army fought but the first, at Hong Kong, ended in complete Japanese occupation and capture of the survivors of the Canadian contingent. With no reprisals available no decorations for

Report Vichy Puts Herriot Under Arrest

ON THE FRENCH FRONTIER, Oct. 2.—(BUP)—Former Premier Edouard Herriot was reported arrested today and interned at his chateau near Lyons, following his refusal to sign a written promise not to attempt to leave France.

Herriot, who was president of the defunct chamber of deputies, and Jules Jeanneney, president of the former French senate, were reported recently to have addressed a letter to Chief of State Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, criticizing the Petain-Pierre Laval government.

The letter warned of dire consequences—hinting at revolution —if the present French government attempted to take France into the war on the Axis side against our allies."

Reports reaching the French frontier today said Herriott was under guard of 10 inspectors at his chateau.

Desert Forces Are Preparing For 'Next Round'

By FRANK L. MARTIN

CAIRO, Oct. 2.—(AP)—A declaration by Lt.-Gen. B. L. Montgomery today that his 8th Army is preparing for the "next round" in the battle of Egypt gave added significance to a sudden thrust in which British forces, striking at dawn, gained a strategic elevation and wiped out a small salient held by the Axis in the central sector of the El Alamein front.

In this operation, carried out on Wednesday and described as "strictly local," the British forces pinched off a wedge which had existed around the Bir El Munassab depression since Rommel's recent frustrated attempt to break through toward Alexandria and the Valley of the Nile.

This line-straightening move drove the Axis forces back from fairly high ground at the lip of the depression, gaining for the British forces an elevation commanding battle lines extending southward toward El Hameimi.

Gen. Montgomery's statement came as he pinned the Victoria Cross, the Empire's highest decoration, on a New Zealand Sergeant.

V. C. TOPS LIST

178 Canuck Soldiers Receive Awards for Gallantry at Dieppe

gallantry were possible, and the Dieppe awards are the first to this dominion's present army for gallantry in the face of the enemy.

FIRST MILITARY HONORS

Some Canadian soldiers have received the George Cross and the George Medal for bravery during or after air raids in Britain, but these, while ranking high in the scale of awards, are not exclusively military decorations. The list released today contains the first military honors for Canadian soldiers in this war.

Col. Merritt becomes the 68th Canadian to win the Victoria Cross. It was awarded to 63 Canadians in the first Great War, and to four in the South African war.

Some of the citations accompanying the awards give a vivid word-picture of the Canadians' exploits. Col. Merritt's citation told how his unit had to cross a bridge in Pourville in the face of heavy machine-gun, mortar and artillery fire. The bridge was covered with the bodies of men in earlier parties which had attempted the crossing. The citation continued: "Waving his helmet Lt. Col. Merritt rushed forward shouting 'Come on over. There is nothing to worry about here.'"

STAYS TO "GET EVEN"

When the time came for the departure, Col. Merritt issued the necessary orders and then "announced his intention to hold off and 'get even' with the enemy. When last seen he was collecting Bren and Tommy guns and preparing a defensive position which successfully covered the withdrawal from the beach."

L. Sgt. Hicksons citation said he "dislodged a three-inch gun by detonating a three-pound charge on the breech.' The Kitchener man, a member of the Royal Canadian Engineers, took command of a platoon after the commander and most of the senior N.C.O.'s were put out of action. He led it against the strongly-defended Casino. The citation continued: "Using explosives, he blew his way through the walls to reach a large concrete gun emplacement: then another charge blew in the steel door killing a gun crew of five."

COMMANDER'S CITATION

Gen. Roberts' citation described how he remained on the bridge of a destroyer during the entire action. The destroyer "Was frequently under fire from shore batteries and was repeatedly dive-bombed and machine-gunned from the air."

Two chaplains were honored. Capt. the Rev. James P. Browne of Sherridon and Dauphin, Man., attached to the Queen's Own Cameron Highladers of Winnipeg, received the Military Cross and Capt. the Rev. Joseph A. Sabourin of Montreal, attached to the Fusiliers Mont-Royal, was mentioned in dispatches. Capt. Browne's citation said "This officer was continuously under fire throughout the whole of the operation."

Of the 178 soldiers decorated, 71 were casualties. Three were were either killed or believed dead, said a list issued by the National Defence Department. Two are prisoners of war and 66 are wounded.

The Queen's own Cameron Highlanders who went ashore at Pourville to the west of Dieppe through a bridgehead established by the South Saskatchewan Regiment and fought their way two miles inland, further than any other unit, received more decorations than any other, 24 in all. They included two D.S.O.'s, three D.S.M.'s, two M.C.'s, four M.M.'s and 13 mentions in dispatches.

S.S.R. GETS 21 AWARDS

The South Saskatchewan Regiment whose commander, Col. Merritt, got the Victoria Cross, won 21 decorations in all. The Royal Hamilton Light Infantry received 22 and the Essex Scottish, who lost all the officers who went ashore but one, received 21.

Headquarters units, which included such senior staff officers as Gen. Roberts and Brig. Mann, accounted for 22 decorations, Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal for 20 and the Royal Regiment of Canada for 16.

Variety of Cases In Police Court

Trafficking in milk bottles brought a fine of $15 and costs against John Kleskow when he appeared in city police court Friday. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was assessed the fine by Magistrate A. I. Millar, K.C.

Among convictions resulting in fines on various liquor charges was one of $40 and costs against Bertha Remier on a charge of intoxication. Fines of $10 and costs each were ordered against Max and Joseph Cardinal, treaty Indians, on similar offences.

Peter Robert Turlock was fined $20 and costs after pleading guilty to entering premises prohibited for an interdict, and a "drunk" woman was fined the minimum $20 and costs.

71 Casualties Among Troops Given Awards

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—(CP)—Of the 178 Canadian soldiers decorated for their service in the Battle of Dieppe 71 were casualties, three of them either killed or believed dead, according to a list released by the defence department. Two are prisoners of war and 66 are wounded.

The Victoria Cross winner, Lt.-Col. C. C. I. Merritt of Vancouver, is a prisoner and so is Capt. A. G. Vandelac of Montreal, who was mentioned in dispatches.

Maj. J. A. Willis, of Windsor, Ont., missing believed killed, and Lieut. J. C. Palms of Detroit, killed in action, were both mentioned in dispatches. Cpl. A. Nesbitt of Montreal, who was reported killed in action or died of wounds, was also mentioned in dispatches.

BRIGADIER WOUNDED

Two winners of the Distinguished Service Order, Brig. Sherwood Lett of Vancouver, and Lt.-Col. Dollard Menard of Montreal, are wounded.

Among other wounded was Capt. R. J. Wilkinson, Estevan, Sask., who won the Military Cross.

Sgt. E. E. Gordon, Wapella, Sask., and L. Cp. G. B. Berthelot of Fife Lake, Sask., were among the winners of the Distinguished Conduct Medal, who were wounded.

The following winners of the Military Medal were wounded: dead, said a list issued by the National Defence Department. Two are prisoners of war and 66 are wounded.

The following were among those mentioned in dispatches who were wounded: Lieut. George Stiles, Vancouver; Major H. Thompson, Norwood, Man.; Capt. R. M. Campbell, Winnipeg; Capt. D. B. DeCew Warner, Vancouver; Capt. Ben. Brackman, Regina; L. Cpl. A. R. Kryanowski, Stry, Alta.; Spr. S. J. MacLeod, Winnipeg; Pte. W. Cawson, Winnipeg; Pte. C. G. Erickson, Winnipeg; Pte. R. L. R.A.F. Planes Raid Flensburg U-Boat Yards

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(CP)—British bombers pounded the Nazi submarine yards at Flensburg and other objectives on the German Baltic coast last night in a resumption of their aerial offensive against Germany after a seven-night lull, it was announced today.

Seventeen planes were reported lost in the night's operations, which included attacks upon Axis shipping off the coast of Holland.

The home front remained quiet, with the government announcing formerly: "Ongoing darkness there was nothing to report."

A DNB dispatch broadcast by the Berlin radio said the British attacked points in northern Germany, but claimed the raids were of no military importance and caused slight damage.

The news and propaganda agency claimed 20 raiders were shot down —losses which it asserted were "out of all proportion to the effects of the attacks."

Chief of U.S. Legion Urges Ruthless War

MEMPHIS, Tenn. Oct. 2.—(AP)—The American Legion's new national commander called last night for "strong men" to lead a ruthless prosecution of the war and ruthless devastation of "lands and cities of our enemies," and then enforce a dictated peace.

The United States must be knit into "a great fighting giant, with the will to kill, destroy and to win," Commander Roane Waring declared in his address prepared for a home-coming celebration marking his return from the legion's national convention at Kansas City.

NOT YET "TOTAL"

"America, even now, has not yet settled down to total war," he said.

"The time has come for us to demand of those to whom we have given unprecedented authority over our lives and fortunes, that all unnecessary wastage of military essentials be stopped. . . .

"Let the stumble-bums, the no-gooders and the bleeding-hearts step out of the picture and let strong men take their places."

The victory that will follow if "the job on the home front is done right," Waring said, must be one marking "the complete annihilation of the governments of Hitler, Hirohito and Mussolini," and the peace must be dictated "only after our victorious armies have marched across and devastated the land and cities of our enemies."

MUST BE TAUGHT

"They must be taught, the German people and the Japanese people and the Italian people, what war really means, and what retribution they will surely face again if in the years to come they again follow false war-like leaders," he said.

Hospital Group Will Meet Here

General health subjects will be discussed at a public health meeting to be held in Memorial Hall at 8.00 p.m., Monday, in connection with the convention of the Alberta Hospital Association.

Among the speakers will be Dr. George F. Stephens, Montreal General hospital superintendent; Dr. Harvey Agnew, Toronto, and Dr. A. F. Archer, Lamont, president-elect of the Canadian Medical Association.

A film, "White Battalion," will be shown to about 65 Alberta hospital executives, Dr. A. H. Baker, Calgary, will preside.

Railway Tie Stock On Hand is Ample

Railway tie stock on hand is sufficient for the 1943 maintenance program, F. B. Tapley, Winnipeg, engineer in charge of maintenance of way, western region, Canadian National Railways, stated on his arrival here in the course of an inspection trip through the province. He added that approximately 1,800,000 reserve stock ties were located at Edmonton.

Despite manpower handicaps, the regular schedule of maintenance of way has been carried through this year. The program included the laying of 150 miles of new steel, the putting in of 3,000,000 new ties and the spreading of 500,000 cubic yards of ballast.

Mr. Tapley, who was stationed here about nine years ago, is a guest at the Macdonald hotel, and will stop over here several days.

R.C.A.F. Officer is Pleased With Gift

Flt. Lt. W. Paul Graham, officer commanding No. 3, R.C.A.F. recruiting centre here, is tickled over a gift he received recently from students of the Edmonton Technical school.

Five beautifully machined models of two-motored Wellington (Wimpy) bombers were received from M. J. Hilton, principal of the school.

Made of wood the models were turned out in the classrooms of the school. They are battle camouflaged and have the British roundels on wings and fuselages. Mounted on stands, the models form a most appropriate ornamentation for the recruiting offices.

Three District Soldiers Gain Dieppe Honors

Three Edmonton district men served with great distinction at Dieppe and the bravery of one, L.-Cpl. Calvin Wilbert J. Helmer of Norwood, in attending wounded men under heavy fire, won him the military medal.

Sgt. Roy Hawkins of Fort McMurray and Cpl. A. L. Kryzanowski of Stry, were both mentioned in dispatches for distinguished behavior in the heavy action. The latter was wounded.

L.-Cpl. Helmer, who was with the Calgary Tank Regiment, exhibited coolness and calmness to an extraordinary degree while caring for wounded under the heaviest fire of the engagement.

The citation sets forth that Helmer "worked unceasingly with no concern for his own safety. His handling and treatment of wounded showed a high degree of efficiency and skill and his cheery manner was a stimulus to all in very trying circumstances."

The Nordegg man was aboard a landing barge, the personnel of which suffered heavy casualties in the first landing attempt. He was born at Lacombe on Aug. 19, 1911. Before joining up he was employed as a truck driver. He enlisted at Red Deer on Feb. 22, 1941 and went overseas on June 20, 1941.

such as the invasion of Poland or Russia, and they always were the biggest inspirational gun the Nazis had in their arsenal.

The issuance of such an order at this time betrays two things: That Hitler actually considers the capture of Stalingrad of tremendous importance; and that extraordinarily (practically unprecedented) encouragement is necessary to accomplish it.

ABSOLUTE BELIEF

And probably it signifies a third thing, Hitler's absolute belief that the city will be taken, for he would never go to such lengths in pledging his personal prestige as he did in his speech, and as is represented by this order of the day, if he did not feel that it would be done.

It would not be surprising if the German troops storming Stalingrad needed encouragement. They have taken murderous punishment and the thought must occur to many of them, as it does to everybody in the outside world, "will the fall of this city now actually affect very much the final outcome of the war, or even of this campaign? In other words, "has it been worth the cost to us?"

BAD FOR RUSSIANS

Whatever the answer to that question may be in the mind of an individual soldier or in the grand strategy of the high command, the position at Stalingrad looks worse now than it ever has, from the Russian standpoint. If Hitler's words have their touted (and often actual) effect, we should see the results soon for his order said, "We expect the fall of Stalingrad in the immediate future."

If this inspirational hypodermic should fail to rally the troops, it would be one of the major psychological upsets of this war, as disastrous to Nazi morale as any military defeat that could be conceived of.

See Birth Record

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—(CP)—There were 363 births in Ottawa during September, bringing the total for the year to 3,375. Indications are that the 1941 all-time high of 4,181 will be topped.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE QUICKLY RELIEVED

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For the purpose get a package of Hem-Roid (from Merrick Drug Stores or any druggist) and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, in a small pan to take faster will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore, tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it stands the height of fame for one to find a painful and embarrassing pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

withdrawal from the beach. Lt.-Col. Merritt is now reported to be a prisoner of war. To his commanding officer's personal daring the success of his unit's operation and the safe re-embarkation of a large portion of it were chiefly due."

Col. Merritt is descended from fighting men on two sides of his family as well as from men who played great roles in Canadian history. He was a brilliant student and an athlete.

In 1932 he was captain of the Vancouver Athletic Club rugby team and the year before had been a member of the Vancouver team which lost to Calgary in the two-game Western Canada semi-finals.

Col. Merritt's father, Maj. Cecil Mack Merritt, was killed at Ypres in the first Great War and mentioned in despatches for conspicuous bravery. Further back in his family, on both his mother's and his father's sides look the shades of high ranking officers, a general in India, another in the Crimean war, a builder of the Welland canal, and a Prime Minister of Canada—Sir Charles Tupper, his great-grandfather.

IS 33 YEARS OLD

Born at Vancouver, Col. Merritt is 33 years old. He entered Royal Military College at Kingston, Ont., at 18, was graduated with honors, was commissioned in his father's old regiment, the Seaforth Highlanders, and studied law in Vancouver.

When war broke out he was appointed a major in the Active army and proceeded overseas with the Seaforths but was later appointed deputy provost marshall of the 1st Division and still later deputy adjutant-general. He took a course at the staff college at Camberley, England, and became general staff officer, second grade, of the Third Division. Last March he was appointed to command the South Saskatchewan Regiment which he led with such gallantry at Dieppe.

NEVER KNEW FEAR

"Take good care of yourself and forget about V.C.'s," Mrs. Merritt, the former Grace Bone of Belleville, told her husband on his departure for overseas.

On receiving word of her husband's honor, with their two small sons at her side, she recalled her parting admonition and indicated she was not sorry he had not obeyed her.

"Cecil, even from childhood, never knew the meaning of fear," said his mother, Mrs. Merritt of Vancouver, who was with her daughter-in-law at Belleville when the word came.

Mrs. Merritt, Sr., has another son overseas, Lieut. William, also with the Seaforth Highlanders, who wrote her describing his brother's conduct as "God-guided leadership," after talking with men who came back from the battle.

Teacher Shortage Will be Relieved

The critical shortage of teachers throughout the province is to be relieved by 98 trainee teachers from Edmonton Normal school, who left Friday for rural school teaching in the Peace River, Grande Prairie and Fairview areas, according to Dr. G. S. Lord principal of the city school.

This is the second group of trainees to leave the institution to help provincial educational authorities meet the teacher shortage in Alberta. Calgary Normal school has sent 55 trainees to rural areas.

The group who left today will teach until Christmas when they return to the Normal for additional instruction. Those trainees continuing instruction at the Normal now will take over schools between Christmas and Easter.

White Vs. Chandler In Game Saturday

WORLD SERIES TRAIN EN ROUTE TO NEW YORK, Oct. 2. —(AP)—Ernie White, St. Louis southpaw, and Spud Chandler, New York righthander, were named today as the opposing pitchers in the third game of the world series at the Yankee Stadium tomorrow.

Chandler was one of the mainstays of the Yankee mound staff in their drive to their second straight American League pennant, winning 16 and losing five. White was ineffective most of the season, due to injuries, but rounded into shape in time to compile a record of seven and five. He clinched the pennant for the Cards, whipping the Chicago Cubs in the first game of last Sunday's doubleheader.

23-Course Dinner with Stalin—He Asks Divine Guidance for Roosevelt

Quentin Reynolds, ace reporter, has, among other gifts, the uncanny ability to be on the scene when world-shaking news breaks. He was in London during the critical days of the Blitz. His books, articles, broadcasts, films and lectures did more to arouse popular support in America for Britain's cause than all the official communiques and propaganda combined.—EDITOR.

Instalment No. 12
By QUENTIN REYNOLDS

The Kremlin is an amazing combination of buildings. There are churches, barracks, office buildings and palace within the high brick wall that surrounds it. There are only three entrances. We left from the National Hotel in cars provided by our respective Embassies. Where they got them I don't know, because cars for hire in Moscow were few and far between. A "Y.M.C.A." boy sat in front of each car beside the chauffeur. Nearly always the "Y.M.C.A." boys in Moscow wear black caps and black leather coats. They couldn't look more sinister. Most of them were young and when they smiled they just looked like pleasant, healthy young men. But they didn't smile very often.

REYNOLDS

We swept through the big Gothic archways (all archways are Gothic to me) and found ourselves inside the wall. We were on the river side and I was surprised to find green grass and trees growing within the wall. The whole atmosphere was that of a college campus on an autumn night.

The former palace of the Czars is, of course, the main building inside the Kremlin wall. It is a huge building, ugly now with its camouflage; rather futile camouflage in view of the fact that the Moscow River flows right by it and on a night with any moon at all, the river would point out the way to the Kremlin as unerringly as the Thames points the way to central London. You can't black-out a river, although the Russians have done a rather ingenious job in hiding that part of the river which is near the Kremlin.

The building was brilliantly lighted inside. A large staircase of white marble led to the rooms above. There were 137 steps to climb, if my arithmetic was correct. Then we turned left, went through a door and came out into an enormous room, perhaps 150 feet long. At each doorway there were two officers on guard and significant was the fact that they were regular army captains.

We walked the length of this room feeling dwarfed by the immensity of its high ceilings and huge crystal chandeliers. Then of course, it looked larger than it was. We turned left and walked through what had once been the throne room; now it was the state banquet room. The walls were relieved by red tapestry framed with gilt and three large crystal chandeliers hung from the ceiling. It was a beautiful room, now set for a hundred people. We walked through it into the next room where we were to await Stalin.

Waiters passed around trays of vodka and thin sweet pastry sticks. There was a seating list and when we found where we were to be, we took stock. By now I knew many of the government figures. Oumansky, who was there acting as interpreter for Beaverbrook, introduced me to the others. Vyacheslav Molotov was there. He is a small man with a Groucho Marx mustache. As commissar of foreign affairs, the equivalent of our secretary of state, Molotov is perhaps the second most important man in the regime, if a one-man regime can be said to have a No. 2 man. Molotov is not very well liked by the diplomatic and journalistic corps in Moscow. They think him cold, ruthless, and no doubt he is.

The correspondents, to a man, mistrust him. They think that he engineered the Russian-German pact. They all think that he was too friendly with von Ribbentrop when the latter visited Moscow. Molotov always looks as though he is watching someone else sucking a lemon. It may be because he is near-sighted and wears very thick spectacles. When he smiles, the set crust of his face seems to crack reluctantly, and you feel that it costs him a physical effort. Molotov is not the kind of man you'd want to sit up with late at night over a bottle.

Smiling Maxim Litvinov was there, a little to our surprise. For some years Litvinov had been in the doghouse. He always hated fascism, so he couldn't even pretend a half-hearted acquiescence when the Russian-German economic pact was signed in August, 1939. Because he was always better known and more highly regarded in Britain and America than perhaps any other Russian, we thought that he had been dusted off and presented just for the duration of the conference. We were afterwards to find out that we had been quite wrong. That evening he was assigned to be Harriman's interpreter.

VOROSHILOV LOOKS EVERY INCH A GENERAL

Marshal Voroshilov was there. Voroshilov is rather small and dapper, but he looks every inch the general. But then anyone wearing that magnificent Red Army uniform, greenish-grey with red and green tabs on the collar, and with the large decorations (which correspondents call "sardine tins" in Moscow) on his chest and with the red sash showing his marshal's rank, would look impressive.

Voroshilov is a likeable person, good-looking with a neatly trimmed mustache and with very small feet. Voroshilov never has the military training which either Budenny or Timoshenko had, but he seems to have become Stalin's favorite. A marshal Russia wears nice uniforms and people cheer him when he reviews troops and the press of the world acclaims him as a military genius when his army wins an important victory, but there is no doubt that there is only one military genius in Russia—Joseph Stalin.

Brilliant Andrei Andreiev, sometimes whispered to be a Crown Prince of the regime, was there chatting with scholarly looking, soft-spoken Lavrenti Beria, who looks like a professor but whose innocent-sounding title, Commissar for Internal Affairs, means that he is head of what was once called the Cheka, later the OGPU and now the NKVD. Plump, benign, rosy-cheeked Vyshinsky, animated, easy to smile, stood chatting with Harriman in French, and it was hard to believe that this was the man who prosecuted and sent either to death or imprisonment at least 100,000 Russian citizens in the 1936 purge, unless you noticed that when he smiled his eyes didn't smile. There was a hint of early frost in those pale blue eyes.

We were all horrified by that purge. We forgot the very meaning of the term. The dictionary defines "purge" as "to make physically and spiritually clean." That purge eliminated Russia's Fifth Column.

I found no British or American correspondent in Russia who thought that the famous confessions made by Radek, Tukhatchevsky, Bukharin, Rykov, Kestinsky, Pletnov, Rosengolz and the others had been extorted by torture. Under Soviet law these and the other hundreds who had been affiliated with them had been guilty of treason and deserved the death penalty. Had only the Low Countries and Poland and Norway and the other states eliminated their own traitors how much happier their fate would have been.

LOZOVSKY SPEAKS SEVERAL LANGUAGES

Perhaps some day we will dig up the Congressional Record and see there the voluntary evidence given by our own Fifth Columnists and find a prosecutor as ruthless and relentless as Vyshinsky. But we are pretty soft. If a man in our country rapes a woman he gets life; if he rapes our country he gets a lecture or radio contract. I sometimes wonder if we deserve the wonderful country we've got.

Lozovsky, the Kremlin spokesman, his neatly trimmed black beard streaked with gray, chatted with everyone in Russian, French, German, Spanish or any other language you happened to know. Everyone was there except that little, forgotten man who is President of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Whatever is his name? Oh yes—Mikhail Kalinin.

Then through the next room we saw Stalin approaching. The hum of talk died down. In his pictures, Stalin looks huge, forbidding, surly. This little man, rather bowlegged, who was walking toward us, was smiling affably, and when he saw Harriman and the Beaver, his face broke into animated welcome. He shook hands with the two mission heads and those of us who were seeing him for the first time were stricken dumb.

His appearance was a contradiction of everything we had ever been led to believe about Stalin. A British correspondent once wrote of Stalin, "He looks like the kindly Italian gardener you have in twice a week." You couldn't find a better description of the Soviet leader than that.

It was not the forbidding frowning figure of a million posters who circled the room being introduced to everyone by Oumansky. He shook hands warmly and murmured a Russian phrase. He wore the gray semi-military tunic in which he is always pictured, but the simple suit fitted so beautifully that Beaverbrook was right when he said afterward, "Stalin is the best-dressed man in Russia."

His left arm is slightly withered and he carries it close to his body, which almost hides the defect. After he had greeted everyone, we went into dinner. I sat between a Russian admiral and a Soviet Foreign Office man. Happily, Eddie Page of our State Department, a Russian-speaking member of our mission sat two seats away to help me out. And Lozovsky, with whom I knew I would be fighting in a few days, sat opposite. I turned all of my charm on Lozovsky, but charming a censor is like charming a snake. The best you can get is an even break.

"STALIN BEST-DRESSED MAN IN RUSSIA"

We had a 23-course dinner. A plate was set in front of you and waiters wearing white ties served egg and onion for caviar. The caviar was in huge bowls on the table. There was both natural caviar and pressed caviar. For everyone whose taste was that plebeian, there was red caviar. I am not one of those who can take his caviar or leave it alone. I just keep on taking it. I know when I've had enough, but I don't care. After I had had two huge portions, Eddie Page, alarmed, called, "Lay off the aviary, caviar. This meal goes on for hours. And you can't refuse anything."

There were several carafes of vodka on the table and as soon as one emptied itself, a waiter refilled it. Every time my glass was half-emptied, the Soviet admiral to my right in great consternation at the lack of hospitality shown me, would fill it, hold up his glass, murmur the conventional "Vashe Zdorovie" and I'd have to drink with him. He talked German happily, so long as he didn't get too complicated, we got along fine.

FOOD WAS GOOD

Meanwhile one course succeeded another on the same plate. You were supposed to finish what was put on your plate and then, before you could lean back and relax, the waiter was there with another course. And the food was so fantastically good that you couldn't say "No" to it. The three high spots were perhaps the mushrooms fried in sour cream, the sturgeon in champagne and the pilaf of quail.

Wine kept coming and going: red wine, white wine, champagne and always vodka. White vodka, yellow vodka, red vodka with peppers in it. And inevitably there were toasts. The toasts are the great feature of formal Russian dinners. Stalin started it around the cold pork and horse radish with a toast to Beaverbrook and one to Harriman, and by the time we reached the borstchok there had been twenty of them. Anyone in the room could give a toast any time he felt like it by getting to his feet and tapping his plate for silence. Getting to one's feet became increasingly difficult as the evening wore on. The toasts were all greeted with loud applause; everyone gave one.

Finally we reached the coiffee stage, and a welcome stage it was. Then Stalin rose and there was something in his manner which made us all very quiet. All evening he had been chatting volubly with Beaverbrook and Harriman, who sat on either side of him. And he had been laughing at Beaverbrook's quips, and when Stalin laughs he laughs with his eyes, too. Stalin looks like the kind of man you would like to know better. But at that moment he looked very serious. He tapped his glass with a knife and then raised his glass. He spoke for perhaps fifteen seconds and then Oumansky picked it up.

"Comrade Stalin says," Oumansky began, "that he would like to propose a toast to the President of the United States. Comrade Stalin says President Roosevelt has the very difficult task of leading a country which is non-belligerent and yet which wants to do all it can to help the two great democracies of Europe in their fight against Fascism. Comrade Stalin says may God help him in his most difficult task."

STALIN ASKS DIVINE HELP FOR ROOSEVELT

There was a stunned silence from us and then great applause from everyone. Harriman leaned over and gripped Stalin's hand, thanking him. Stalin wasn't smiling now. He had meant that toast. It was an amazing moment. Stalin the anti-Christ; Stalin who had divorced the Church entirely from the State; Stalin who had acted on the Communistic doctrine, "Religion is the opium of the people"—he was publicly, before the world, humbly asking Divine help for Roosevelt. Any yet the Russians in the room were not surprised. I spoke to Lozovsky, Litvinov and Oumansky about it afterward and they in fact were puzzled at our surprise.

Stalin's final electric toast meant that the dinner was over. But we were not yet through. Soviet state officials haven't much use for the morning hours. Stalin, for instance, never makes an appointment before six in the evening. But then he'll work all night. It was midnight when we finished dinner, but midnight to Russians is the hour when they become fully awake. Stalin led the way to another room. We were to see some motion pictures. The Kremlin theatre is a lovely room, beautifully panelled with indirect lighting and large enough to seat about two hundred. Beaverbrook looked around it enviously as we entered. His private motion-picture theatre at Cherkley, his estate at Leatherhead, is nice enough, but this dwarfed it. There was a table in front of each comfortable seat and, even before we were seated, waiters were putting plates of pastry and glasses of champagne on the tables. First we saw a badly done documentary picture called War of the Future. It had been made in 1938 and showed a war between Germany and Russia. Prophetically enough, it showed Germany invading the Soviet Union.

Unfortunately, the miniature shots of bombed villages were so crude and so obvious that the whole effect of the picture was lost.

Then we saw a full-length (and a Soviet picture is really full-length) picture called "Volga, Volga," which was all about a boy meeting a girl. The music in it was beautiful and the picture itself might have been enjoyable, but that huge dinner had so sapped our strength that we could only look at it feebly at the screen and wish that we were home in bed. It didn't end until 3 a.m. Stalin pressed everyone to have just one more and then we all shook hands with him and said "good night."

HALF-HOUR INTERVIEW WITH STALIN

"What'll he do now?" I asked Oumansky.

"Oh, he has several appointments tonight," Oumansky said. "He'll go right to the office. Did you like that documentary picture?"

"Frankly, I thought it was lousy, didn't you?"

"Yes," he admitted, "I've wanted to ask you something. Would you do a picture for us while you are here? Something along the lines of 'London Can Take It'? You would work with Eisenstein. You would have our best film unit. We would appreciate it."

There is one thing I want above all others," I said, ignoring what Oumansky has said. "I want to interview Stalin. I want half an hour with him — that's all. And as for the picture, let's talk about it later."

Oumansky nodded thoughtfully. I like to do business with a man like Oumansky. Oumansky, like all Russians, is an uncompromising realist. He knew what I meant. Well, I'd make a dozen pictures for him if I could have half an hour with Stalin.

"You will hear from me," Oumansky smiled.

Army Show Troupe Being Formed to Entertain Troops

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—(CP)—The National Defence Department last night announced formation of an official Canadian army entertainment troupe, to be known as "The Army Show."

Actors and musicians now serving in the army will be drawn upon in casting the production. A talent hunt already is under way through all ranks of the army, including the Canadian Women's Army Corps.

Purpose of show, said a department statement, will be to provide good modern entertainment for troops in training and in service and where possible to furnish the general public with a picture of army life from the lighter side. The show may ultimately perform overseas.

CHEMISTRY HELPS TO WIN THE WAR

Nylon

Now Saves Our Airmen's Lives

WHAT has happened to Nylon — that wonderful hosiery which came and went so quickly? Nylon yarn has gone active . . . into the fabric of man-bearing parachutes.

Remember the outstanding qualities of Nylon . . . soft as silk and much more durable? Well, those qualities of lightness, durability and tensile strength make Nylon the ideal parachute fabric. Today, our airmen have cause to praise the inventiveness of industrial chemistry, which devised this wonderful yarn.

Nylon is produced by chemical processes from abundantly available domestic materials. A new C-I-L plant at Kingston, Ontario, manufactures Nylon yarn — the entire output is earmarked for active service.

Apple Day

Once again the Kiwanis Club are selling apples, to obtain money with which to carry on the home for under-privileged children. Members of the club will be on the streets tomorrow offering the fruit, in lots large or small, to passersby. They will no doubt, as they should, do a thriving business, and gather in a goodly sum for continuing the excellent service they are and have for years been rendering to boys and girls who need the helping hand.

The apples will be good. The cause could not be better. The Kiwanians deserve public recognition and support for the time and effort they are putting into the task of giving a home to homeless little ones and an opportunity in life they would not otherwise have. May the sales be brisk—and the proceeds larger than ever.

No Lectures Needed

Marshal Petain has done the people of Madagascar the doubtful honor of urging them to remain loyal to France. They needed no such prompting from the Nazi-bossed cabinet at Vichy nor the unfortunate old man whose name and record is its one claim to respectability.

The people of Madagascar have not failed in loyalty to France in any respect. They paid ceremonial regard to the illegitimate pretensions of Laval by offering "symbolic" resistance to the British forces at his bidding. But they cheered when British troops marched into Tananarive and made no very serious attempt to keep them out of the island ports and other strategic positions.

As a result the flag of France—not that of Japan—now flies over Madagascar, and will continue to fly there until France takes its place again among the independent nations and a responsible French government can resume the guardianship of the colony.

All this Petain knows. It is believable that he wrote his message with his tongue in his cheek and to avert the suspicion of Berlin—not because he thought the French or the natives in Madagascar needed his admonitions or would pay any serious heed to lectures on patriotism from a source so close to M. Laval.

The War in Quebec

The blackout that has been ordered along the south shore of the St. Lawrence and on the Gaspe peninsula is not a practice. It is the real thing. It has been ordered for two purposes: to protect ships using the waterway, and to protect the towns in this area against the danger of being shelled by Axis submarines.

The war has come to Quebec, right into the heart of the province, and seemingly with increasingly dangerous possibilities. Weeks ago some merchant vessels were sunk just where the river widens into the Gulf. Somewhere in those waters the Raccoon and the Charlottetown went down fighting enemy U-boats.

The blackout means that the waterway has not been cleared of the submarines. It may imply that these are more numerous than they were. It certainly implies expectation that they will grow more daring as the nights grow longer and will attempt attacks on coastal towns. The lights-out order is to hold until countermanded, which does not seem likely to be done until the river freezes or drift ice makes the stream and the Gulf dangerous for the under-water craft.

If anyone in Quebec has thought this to be a far-off war, which Canadians could observe without local or personal concern, he knows better now. The enemy is in his river, and liable to blow his house to pieces if he lives along the St. Lawrence.

That Empty Room

The backing of the city council has been given to the chamber of commerce in conducting an Accommodation Bureau. As the name suggests, the Bureau is a place where strangers coming to the city may go for information as to securing living quarters. In the crowded conditions which exist, and which are certain to become even more congested as winter closes in, the need of such a place is obvious.

In providing this service the chamber of commerce is not only doing a favor to those who may need the help, but also a favor to the city, because it is important for many reasons that those who come here on public or private business should experience as little difficulty as need be in getting satisfactorily located. As a gesture of welcome alone the Bureau will justify itself. And the humanitarian feature of thus trying to serve the stranger is not to be overlooked.

To make the service as useful as it should be there will have to be co-operation on the part of residents who have apartments or rooms or houses to rent, or quarters which they could rent in urgent circumstances. These circumstances have arisen in Edmonton, and it is the part of good citizenship to help meet the situation.

It should not be that people will have to stay away from Edmonton, or leave the city, because living quarters cannot be found. To avoid this, residents who have spare accommodation are asked to communicate with the Bureau, which is located in the offices of the chamber of commerce.

More Soldiers Called

Canadian boys of 19, and aliens who are not of enemy citizenship, are to be called for compulsory military training. This it is calculated will add 140,000 men to the army, perhaps more.

Under present regulations the new recruits will be assigned to duty in Canada only. But under the amended mobilization law trainees may be sent abroad if and when they are needed, by the passing of an order-in-council. As the training period now has to be a long one, the boys of 19 will likely be 20 or 21 before they are sent abroad, if they have to be sent at all.

The calling of aliens residing in the Dominion is a new departure. Heretofore only British subjects were liable to call. As enemy aliens are barred, the ruling will apply only to those who came from countries which are at war with the Axis or which are non-belligerent.

This extension of military obligation is based on the principle that a country which is good enough to live in is good enough to fight for. It is also a mark of confidence in the men who have come from friendly countries to make Canada their home. Their willingness and fidelity are counted on; and anyone who takes note of the large numbers of non-British and non-French names on the rolls of our fighting forces will have no doubt that splendid fighting material will be found among these non-naturalized residents.

Broadening of the draft in these ways is another indication of the growing scarcity of man-power. Hitherto the call has been restricted to older men and to those holding citizenship status.

Looking Backward

From The Bulletin Files

1892 – 50 Years Ago

Rev. Alex. McDonald of Grafton, and Rev. P. Mitchell of St. Thomas, North Dakota, arrived on Thursday's train. The former was the pioneer missionary of the Baptist church in Winnipeg.

Major H. S. Moore and D. H. Macdowall, M.P., who constitute the firm of Moore & Macdowall, of Prince Albert and Edmonton, arrived on Thursday from Prince Albert.

The survey parties of Messrs. Miles, Hubbel, Gibbons and St. Cyr, who have been engaged in restaking old surveys in township 50, passed through town on Friday on the way to Ft. Saskatchewan to work in township 54.

The Sultana gold mine at the Lake of the Woods has been sold for $125,000.

Premier Cayley is out with a letter explaining in reply to Senator Perley that he does not have to resign on account of the failure of his party to elect a Speaker nominated by him. Mr. Cayley says: "If it was our duty to elect a Speaker we should have done so, and failing in that should have resigned." Mr. Cayley's explanation (?) fills two columns of the Regina Leader. It amounts to this, that according to practice in the Dominion House of Commons if Mr. Cayley had proposed the Speaker in his capacity of "premier" and his nominee been defeated, he would have been bound to resign; but having made the nomination only in his capacity as a private member—several days after he had announced himself leader of the executive and therefore of the house—he was not bound to resign. This is a fair sample of the style of argument which the gentleman of the "Bronic countenance"—to quote the Regina Leader—in his less abusive moments, puts forth as reasoning.

Ottawa: Sir Henry Thornton has been appointed head of the National Railway system, and will take up the duties of the office in a month.

1932 – 10 Years Ago

Seattle: Pieces of the battered hulk of the freighter Nevada are pounding on a rocky Aleutian island where 34 members of her crew were drowned, only three escaping.

Athens: Count of the victims of the earthquake at Chalcidice has reached 200 dead, and the list still grows.

New York: Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for the presidency, told a mammoth meeting at Sioux City, Iowa, that the farmer had been attacked on the one hand by towering tariffs and on the other by a depreciating dollar.

We Have Asked for Total War; Now We'll Get It

Manpower and Materials To Be Devoted To Single Purpose

By HAROLD L. WEIR

Recent speeches by Donald Gordon and Elliott Little, controllers, respectively, of wartime prices and of Canadian manpower, indicate that very stringent regulations are in store for the people of this country.

Mr. Gordon more than hints that we are to have rationing of essential goods, the standardization of products, adjustments in quality and the strictest elimination of waste.

His plan involves the complete wiping out of all non-essential production and the reduction of essential production to the barest minimum for civilian use.

Mr. Gordon's department, he states, has assumed the responsibility for seeing that all non-essential civilian activities are curtailed or eliminated.

Mr. Little and his collegues have the task of directing all labor into the most efficient uses.

One would judge from the tone of both these addresses, disclosing these facts, that rigorous action along these lines was imminent.

Organization

It has been very clear to the economists and not much of a secret to the average man that our productive efficiency in normal times falls far below par.

Over a period of years, private industry has been attempting to regulate this deficiency, and, had normal times continued, the ordinary evolution of industry would have produced a remedy.

But the sudden occurrence of war, something to which our system of economics was not attuned, and something to which the democratic system of economics is always reluctant to be attuned, has produced an emergency in which democratic methods cannot be reconciled with the exigencies of fact.

In other words, the activities of the totalitarian states have created an abnormal condition in which we must take abnormal measures, just as the production of an artificial fever in a diseased body is sometimes necessary to effect a cure.

The total regimentation and mobilization of a nation's manpower to preserve the integrity of the state may be, intrinsically, an evil thing. But it is a necessary thing because it is the sort of thing that has been set up against us by our enemies.

Recognizing the inherent iniquity and moral retrogression in the step, we still must take it in the same heroic fashion as a surgeon violates the integrity of the human body to eradicate an ailment that otherwise might cause death.

It is a serious thing to invade the free will of the individual, to compel a course of action, except in cases where actual wrong-doing is involved, where the individual is bereft of choice.

Public Demand

Only one circumstance justifies the stringent steps inferentially suggested by Mr. Gordon and Mr. Little.

That circumstance is the tremendous public demand for total war.

The press of Canada has urged it. The political parties of Canada, with vehement but not very important exceptions, have urged it. The issue has been pressed on the platform and on the street corner.

Moreover the plebiscite of last spring on the question of conscription for overseas service was an overwhelming mandate, not only for the application of indiscriminate compulsion to secure a full complement in our armed forces, but to proceed forthwith to a strong and postive war effort in which the basic principle would be utter equality of sacrifice.

The Canadian people realize, or declare they have realized, that the most complete surrender of private interests and ambitions is the only way we can win the war.

That is what we have asked for. That is what we have demanded.

Well, we have got it now—or will get it very soon—and the question is whether we will have the fortitude to stand up to it.

Privation

There is no use dodging the fact that, if these proposals go into effect with regard to the control of manpower and production, Canadians are in for a pretty thin time.

We are going to have to give up all of those little luxuries to which millions of us have been accustomed. We are going to have to readjust our lives to a stern business in which the individual can claim few, if any, rights. We are going to have to surrender all private ambition and a good many of our private hopes.

Indeed, most of those freedoms which have been our boast for a century will have to be handed over, temporarily, to the keeping of the state.

This is a pretty rigorous affair.

But the manner of our acquiescence will determine our right to exist.

No man deserves freedom unless he is ready to fight for it. And it is not to be expected that we can ever preserve our freedom without at least a portion of the same effort and difficulty and pain with which we acquired it.

The very existence of freedom is predicated upon sacrifice. And it is not at all paradoxical, actually, to say that the temporary surrender of freedom is a perfectly natural and reasonable price to pay for the permanent acquisition of it.

Self-Reliance in the Home

Householders Must Learn To Do More Odd Jobs For Themselves

By MARY ALICE QUAYNE

As the war wears on and both materials and skilled workers are absorbed more completely into the war effort, the woman of the house will have to learn, or rather relearn, the art of becoming more self-reliant.

A good many household repairs for instance, which ordinarily are sent out to professionals, will have to be taken care of within the home.

Several ordinary household services, such as laundry, dry-cleaning and so on, which we have come to accept as an ordinary part of our daily lives, will doubtless be first curtailed and possibly completely eliminated, at length, as the drive continues to minimize non-essential industries or, rather, industries which are not absolutely required for existence, to place more and more men and equipment into war work.

It looks very much as though, in many respects, women will be required to return to the necessary self-reliance of pioneer days.

The frills are definitely being shorn from wartime life.

It is my opinion that a better and a sounder generation is going to arise from it.

Family Slackness

Not only is there intrinsic merit in self-reliance itself, but the new order of living is bound to drive much slackness out of family life.

And no one can deny that, through the past 20 years, family life, in many instances, has grown desperately slack.

There has been a disposition to hand over too many personal responsibilities to professional agencies.

Take the raising of children, for instance. The schools, through tragic necessity, have encroached more and more on the duties of parenthood. Senool medical and dental services have been set up to protect child health for the simple reason that many parents neglected their obligations in that respect.

Society has found it necessary to establish public doctors to protect the little bodies of children from disease.

The schools have been forced to take drastic steps to protect their little minds from ignorance.

And it has devolved almost entirely upon the churches to save their little souls from perdition.

What duty have parents reserved for themselves?

Nor has the easy life of our past luxurious period contributed very much to the stability of homes.

As responsibilities disappear, or are shoved off on somebody else, the tendency is to dodge all responsibility. Nothing makes a person more fit for work than work itself. Similarly, nothing makes a person more fit for responsibilities than having to shoulder a good many of them.

Conversely nothing unfits a person more readily for responsibility than the opportunity to shed it.

That is what has happened in millions of reasonably prosperous homes throughout North America. The result is that homes, not being founded on a deep sense of personal responsibility, have lost stability. Home life has lost its meaning.

We don't value anything very much that doesn't cost an effort. And we have ceased to value home life because it has cost us so little to maintain.

It seems to me that what we are going to lose in ease, we are going to gain in character. It seems to me that the additional effort to maintain homes and sustain family life is going to make them infinitely more precious to us.

At least, I hope so.

Some Questions

An Edmonton woman who is optimistic enough to think she is going to keep driving her car throughout the winter, asks me if there is any cheap and handy substitute for alcohol or glycerine in radiators during the cold weather.

I am informed that a 28 per cent. solution of calcium chloride in water will withstand a temperature of 22 below zero and does not attack metals. I cannot guarantee this because I have never tried it.

Another woman wants to know how to detect a leakage in gas pipes in the house.

Rub a little soap water on the suspected place. The formation of a bubble will show where the leak is.

Don't try experimenting with lighted matches.

Dreiser Incident in Toronto

FROM TORONTO SATURDAY NIGHT

It was extremely fortunate for all those associated with the visit to Toronto of Mr. Theodore Dreiser that Mr. Dreiser relieved his mind of his views about the British nation, people and government in an interview the day before his lecture, instead of saving them for the public platform.

As a matter of fact, we think it is a good thing that the Dreiser affair has happened. Canadians have been subjected in the last few months to a barrage of meetings organized by our more extreme Leftists for the purpose of cashing in on the present well-deserved popularity of Russia. Most of these meetings, we are strongly convinced, are intended much more for the future political advantage of the Communist party in Canada than for any immediate benefit to the Russians. If Mr. Dreiser had confined himself, as most of his predecessors have, to eulogies of the Russians, it would have been impossible to take any exception to his utterances, although there might very well have lurked behind them, as there has behind many others, the vague suggestion that because they do not enjoy the merriment neither Great Britain nor advantages of a Communist government even the United States (which Mr. Dreiser does not greatly love), can be relied upon to put up a truly "anti-Fascist" struggle. Mr. Dreiser merely said in a few uncompromising words what has been latent in the whole attitude of many of our Leftists ever since they suddenly discovered that this was an "anti-Fascist" war.

The advantage of a man like Mr. Dreiser is that he blurts out frankly what is in his mind, while people like Professor Frank Scott say the same things in subtle and polished phrases which do far more damage and which cannot be dealt with by the Toronto police commissioners or the minister of justice. It is just as well that it should be brought to public attention that the motive behind a great deal of the present campaigning for a second front and for an unmitigated and undiscriminating admiration of Russia is a deepseated hostility to the British people and the whole political system which they developed and by which they stand, including their adherence to the tenets of the Christian religion. Mr. Dreiser's mentality is not widely different from that of our own more extreme Leftists; the amazing thing is that he should have wanted to talk to them, and they should have wanted to hear him, on the subject of "Democracy on the Offensive," since neither he nor they have the slightest interest in democracy whether it is on the offensive or the defensive.

French Republic

BY PROF. D. W. BROGAN, CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY

It is probable that the Republic has as complete a hold on the minds of the majority of the French people as ever, and much more of a hold than it had in 1939 or 1940. For it should be remembered that to the average Frenchman the Republic was not a mere piece of governmental mechanism but a semi-mystical ideal of liberty and justice, a pattern laid up in heaven and never quite brought down to the vulgar earth by any political device.

To be Republican was not merely to be in favor of government without an hereditary chief, but to be in favor of the rights of man, of the principles of 1789, of all that is the antithesis of Hitler's "New Order," of a whole body of ideals too great and too noble to be degraded into being a mere antithesis of the feeble antiquarian reaction of Vichy. Monarchy, the Empire, the Republic, these are great names and great traditions, but only the last is still alive in French hearts.

The sight of so fundamentally unrepublican a government as is provided by the German army of occupation, and by the French parasites, has revived faith in the republic not merely as a government but as a way of life. Vichy has hardly attempted to provide an alternative ideal, in spite of its occasional adoption of miscellaneous slogans borrowed either from reaction or from the France or from its German masters.

The attempt to Nazify the mind of France when undertaken not by that able renegade from the Ecole Normale Superieure, Marcel Deat, but by the anti-Semitism anti-Bolshevism, anti-Anglo-Saxonism, mixed with vague and unconvincing promises of German benevolence, have not been adequate substitutes for most Frenchmen for great and noble ideals which goes back to Saint Louis and the tradition of equality which goes back to 1789.

The Republic, in its most general and most generous sense, seems more beautiful than ever to Frenchmen under the Germans.

Talking of Fronts

BY THE MILITARY CORRESPONDENT OF THE LONDON OBSERVER

What of the west? There is, of course, no second front here. It is dangerously misleading to talk and think in terms or fronts. There is an occupied zone some hundreds of miles deep which stretches from the North Cape to the Bay of Biscay which dictates not only defence in depth, but equally the manner and direction of attack. This zone for such it is, and not just a coast-line—is guarded by 40 Nazi divisions, of which, it is said, but three are armored, and by about 500 fighters and bombers of the Luftwaffe.

This may seem a paltry force compared with the masses in the east. Nevertheless 700,000 soldiers in prepared positions are a formidable force, and no greater disservice could be done to our cause than to underrate the defensive strength of the Germans in Western Europe. They have made the fullest use of strategic disposition to increase the strength of this force by giving it great mobility and powers of concentration. They are not "buttered in a thin layer along the length of the European coast-line. Instead, they have been concentrated in the ports which have been developed into "hedgehog" strong points. The Germans believe these can be held for the first critical days of an invasion. Behind the coast the mobile forces are concentrated in such a way as to be able to strike together at any one point of assault.

In other words, the German plan of defence is based upon making the fullest use of interior lines of communication to bring a superior force to bear upon any landing attempt. The slowness of landing from ships, of course, has facilitated German preparations. But against this must be set the important circumstance of the enemy having to operate in hostile country and with men and a civil organization which are only the second best which the Wehrmacht could produce.

Butch stood before the magistrate.

"You are accused," droned the magistrate, "of walking into a restaurant, smashing the furniture, striking the waiter, and resisting arrest." He looked up. "How do you plead—guilty or not guilty?"

Butch blushed.

"You shouldn't ask me that," he murmured. "I'm prejudiced."

LONDON STOCKS

LONDON, Oct. 2—(CP)—Today's stock market trading was active and the close generally firm. Industrials, home rails and diamonds were mostly better. Oils were maintained. British funds finished higher in most cases.

Winnipeg Wheat Prices Unchanged

WINNIPEG, Oct. 2—(CP)—Trades were recorded in both October and December wheat on Winnipeg Grain Exchange today, but prices held to previous closing levels. The October futures closed at 90 cents a bushel and December at 91¼.

Export sales of Canadian wheat to the United Kingdom were estimated at 400,000 bushels.

In the cash wheat market mills were credited with taking 400,000 bushels of No. 1 Northern.

In the coarse grain pit shippers, southern houses and mills purchased oats and barley, while rye trade was quiet.

Country marketings at Winnipeg yesterday totalled 1,740,000 bushels compared with 760,000 bushels a year ago. Grain inspections at Winnipeg yesterday totalled 194 cars as against 457 a year ago.

Price Skyrockets For Chicago Hogs

CHICAGO, Oct. 2—(AP)—A dearth of hogs here and at other cities caused prices to spurt to new 22-year-throughout the livestock circuit today highs. Hogs broke through the previous 22-year-peak, $15.40 a hundred pounds, in spectacular fashion. On gains ranging from 25 to 35 cents, choice types sold at $15.65 a hundred pounds. This was the highest since Oct. 18, 1920, when the top was $15.75.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—(AP)—The office of price administration last night issued an order to meat packers cutting the amount of meat going into civilian consumption by almost 20 per cent. The order is a preliminary step to the meat-rationing program which will cut consumers to about 2½ pounds a week by the end of the year.

C.W.A.C. Plans Parade in City Saturday Night

Second class of graduates from the Canadian Women's Army Corps training centre at Vermilion, totalling 350, will parade through city streets on Saturday after a graduation dinner at the Macdonald, it was announced Friday by Capt. Pearl Brent, senior officer of the C.W.A.C., at M.D. 13.

The woman soldiers, who are from all parts of the West, will arrive here from Vermilion by special train and will march directly to the Macdonald hotel along 100 street.

After the banquet the women will form up for a parade, headed by the regimental band of the 2nd (Reserve) Bn., the Edmonton Regiment. The parade will move north on 100 street to Jasper avenue, and then west to 107 street. The marchers will then return east along Jasper avenue.

TO TAKE SALUTE

At 105 street the salute will be taken by Capt. Renee Haweis, commandant of the Vermilion training centre.

Continuing eastward to 101 street the parade will turn north. At the C.N.R. station some of the women will leave the parade and entrain for western points. The remainder will proceed to the Prince of Wales armory, where there will be a dance in honor of the graduates.

The parade will start from the Macdonald at 8 p.m.

Preview and Review Of Sport

By Hal Dean

Sports Editor of The Edmonton Bulletin

WESTGLEN bantams, by virtue of their 7-5 victory over their traditional rivals from Vic yesterday afternoon, took over the leadership of their division in High School football. And Scona broke into the win column with an 11-5 setback to Sep.

Incidentally Westglen pupils have installed a loudspeaker in order that spectators might be kept more fully informed as to progress of play and the innovation has proved a decided success.

The enterprising Students' Union of the school got behind the project and put it across, with Ken Dunkley one of the prime movers. Jack Brown and Neville Perry handled the first two games and made a swell job of it.

TWO FOOTBALL GAMES

EDMONTON'S football menu for the balance of the week has been well provided for with games scheduled both for tonight and Saturday.

This evening Sqdn. Ldr. John Lees will kick off at 8:30 for the E.A.C.-Maple Leaf junior league affair at Clarke Stadium and FO. Mac Eggleston, now out at No. 3 "M" Depot called to make certain that the R.C.A.F. return clash with Varsity was not overlooked. The latter is also under the floodlights at Clarke Stadium.

Maple Leafs and E.A.C. are even up so far this season, each having taken one of the two games. The Leafs have had tough sledding in their last three appearances, but they certainly can't be counted out of the playoffs. A win for the blue and white tonight would however brighten their chances and Coaches Bill Perzek, Ken McAuley and A. Tercier can be counted upon to be in there pitching.

"YANKANUCKS" GO BOWLING

BOWLING is gradually gaining momentum in this city these days and seven leagues were in operation at the Rec on Thursday night. The name of one of these, "Yankanucks," appears to be rather intriguing.

Quite in keeping with the team work between citizens of the great Republic to the south and Canadians in many other directions in these troublesome times, the league is just one more example of co-operation.

The Yankanucks are all employees of two American firms with branches in the city: Bachtel, Price and Callahan, and Turnbull, Sverdrup and Parcel and they number 168, 40 per cent. of whom according to Earl Nichols, president of the league, are from the United States.

The president is an American his home being in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and the vice-president, Bob Lewis, is also from the U.S. Margaret Steward, the secretary is a Canadian and so is the originator of the name, Eleanor Pillar.

There are three divisions of eight teams each in the Yankanucks. The 10-pinners hold forth on Tuesday nights, with mixed fives rolling on Thursdays and Fridays.

Jack Cooke, of the Kitty Hawks, had high single last night and the triple went to Esther Faltinow of the Pluggers with 620.

R.C.A.F. Will Play Return Game With Varsity Saturday

Saturday night at Clarke Stadium, commening at 8:30 p.m., the R.C.A.F. football squad will tangle with Tommy Hay's Varsity Golden Bears in what promises to be a good exhibition of the fall pastime.

In the previous meeting of these two teams, the Bears squeezed out a close 8-4 decision but the airmen are confident that they will turn the tables in the forthcoming contest.

The students lineup will be bolstered considerably with a sprinkling of new men. Don Johnson, speedy backfielder and Lucien Lambert, center man, who played with last year's edition of the Golden Bears will be making their initial appearance of the 1942 season.

Another speedy ball carrier who should be a big help is Darcy Duncan who performed with South Side Juniors last fall. However Ken Dickerson, starry middle, will not be in action due to a broken finger which he incurred at a recent practice.

McCoubrey and Clement who sparked the R.C.A.F. in their first encounter will again be in action along with several new comers who will strengthen the club considerably.

Branch Rickey and Sam Breadon About To Call it Quits

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Sometime soon after the current world series, if undenied rumors are true, there will come an announcement of the dissolving of one of the most famous partnerships in baseball history—Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey of the Cardinals.

Rickey, the father of baseball's chain-store system, is slated to switch allegiance to another club, probably in the National League despite recurring reports that he may tie up with the St. Louis Browns. His five year contract as general manager of the Cardinals runs out this season.

Rickey and Breadon have been working together for 24 successful years—ever since Breadon, then an automobile dealer, invested $2,000 in the down-at-the-heels club and was promptly elected president.

From then on Breadon wrote the cheques and Rickey did the miracle work. Just a farmer boy at heart, he soon inaugurated the famed baseball farm system, a scheme of developing his own players in the minor leagues and shuffling them along to the big time as they were needed.

The idea was poo-pooed at first. Yet other clubs looked twice and began doing it.

And now that Sam and Branch have decided to come to the friendly parting of ways they could have found no more fitting time to close the books.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2.—When Coach Bill Killefer returned from a scouting trip through the American Association, Hans Lobert of the Phils asked him if he saw any capable catchers.

"Yeah, one good one, and he's better than a lot of those now in the majors," replied Scout Killefer.

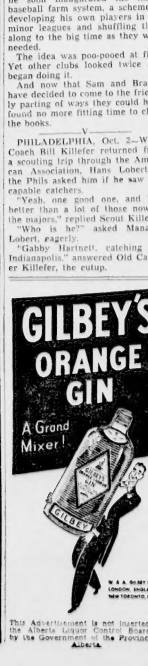

"Who is he?" asked Manager Lobert, eagerly.

"Gabby Hartnett, catching for Indianapolis," answered Old Catcher Killefer, the cutup.

BEAZLEY FALTERS BUT FINALLY TRIUMPHS

Cardinal Speed Offsets Yankee Power

Comes Through

Although Johnny Beazley, rookie pitcher for St. Louis, had his tough moments with the Yankee power house yesterday, Manager Bill Southworth left him in and the youngster delivered magnificently. He escaped damage in the ninth after allowing two hits, but Enos Slaughter came to the rescue by cutting off Stainback at third with a perfect throw from right field. Beazley then got pinch-hitter "Red" Ruffing and Rizzuto to retire the side.

"In the Clubhouse"

Rookie Gets Credit For Doing Fine Job

By CHARLES DUNKLEY

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Boyish Johnny Beazley, 23-year-old rookie, pitching and winning his first world's series game, was the hero of a rousing reception in St. Louis Cardinals' dressing room after their 4-3 triumph over New York Yankees Thursday.

Grinning, with a day's growth of whiskers on his youthful face, Beazley was supremely happy as Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, told him he had turned in a grand performance. Manager Billy Southworth told him the same thing. His thammates slapped him on the back, all yelling: "Great going, kid."

Beazley, peeling off his shirt, smiled joyously. Suddenly he shouted:

"Hey, you guys! Now we know them fellers can be beat. Let's go and get them."

He said he threw everything he had at the Yankee bombers and the ball Charley Keller propelled to the right-field pavilion roof in the eighth was a curve.

Keller, he said, was a good hitter, and "you can't get good hitters out all dby long."

Who of the Yankees was the toughest, Beazley was asked.

"Hell, boy, they're all tough," he replied, "just tough as hell."

Beazley ducked for the showers because the Cardinals had less than two hours in which to dress and get to their New York-bound train.

Manager Billy Southworth said:

"All I know is we got to win four ball games. We've won the first.

"It will be either Ernie White or Max Lanier in New York Saturday. I don't know which. Haven't made up my mind."

The Yankee clubhouse was a picture of disgust and disappointment. For several minutes there was nothing but stony silence.

Keller, the Yankee left-fielder, was the first to break out, blasting a bitter complaint about the decision of Umpire George Magerkurth in calling Whitey Kurowski's seventh-inning triple a fair ball. Keller claimed the drive was foul.

Manager Joe McCarthy sat with his head in his hands, then said:

"Yes, I've got a lot to say, but not before all you newspapermen."

He was plainly angry about the whole thing.

Benoit And Dame Asked To Report

TRAIL, B.C. Oct. 2.—(CP)—Joe Benoit and Bunny Dame, members of the Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League, said Thursday they had received notice from Manager Dick Irvin to report in Montreal for pre-season practice.

Benoit said he would leave next Monday or Tuesday. Asked what offer he had received he said he would have to wait until he got to Montreal to find out.

Dame said he wouldn't leave unless he received better terms than those offered him.

Junior Rugby League

Maple Leafs Will Play E.A.C. Grid Squad Tonight

The Maple Leaf junior football team faces a crucial encounter this evening when they do battle with the Edmonton Athletic Club gridmen at Clarke Stadium at 8:30 p.m.

A win for the Leafians would send them shooting into a second place tie with the R.C.A.F. in the league standings.

On the other hand should the E.A.C. come out on top, the losers chances of gaining a berth in the playoffs would grow mighty slim. Also Paul Kirk's gang can clinch top place in the league by turning in a victory tonight.

These two clubs have met twice already this season with the Leafs taking the decision in the first and the E.A.C. nicking off the second.

Although the Maple Leafs have had rather tough going in their last games, they have some very outstanding players. There is no better tackler in the league than Vernon Lawrence and Johnny Dutchak is just as good a ball carrier as either of the other teams boast. Pete Danylowich is not only good on the offence, but can boot the old pigskin as well.

Squadron Leader John Lees will perform the kick-off honors tonight and the Edmonton Newsboys Band under the leadership of T. V. Newlove will be in attendance.

Outhit 10 - 6 Redbirds Run On to Victory

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 2.—(AP) Showing the same speed and grit which won them the National League championship, St. Louis Cardinals Thursday tamed New York Yankees 4-3 before 34,255 fans in another breath-taking chapter of the 1942 world series. They left for New York last night all even with the American League powerhouse.

The Redbirds simply ran their way to victory with probably the most dazzling show of sprinting the present Yankees ever had seen. Their will to win more than offset New York's slugging which was climaxed with a tremendous two-run homer by Charley Keller to tie the score momentarily in the eighth inning.

Held to only six hits by Big Ernie Bonham while the Yankees pummelled Johnny Beazley, the Cards' 23-year-old rookie sensation for 16 St. Louis scored twice in the first inning, again in the seventh and finally won the game with a thrilling tally in the last half of the eighth.

MAKE SPEED COUNT

Speed figured in every one of the Cardinal runs but never more so than with the second tied and the pressure on in the eighth.

Jim Brown and Terry Moore were easy outs but Enos Slaughter slammed a scorching liner to the deepest corner of the right field and slid headlong into second base for a double. Phil Rizzuto let the throw slip a few yards away from him and while he was trying to locate it Slaughter dashed safely to third.

Before the smoke had cleared Stan Musial, the rookie outfielder who had a chance to be a hero Wednesday and failed, smashed a ground single directly over second base to bring home the deciding run.

Much of the responsibility for the Yankees' defeat could be charged to the fact that Bonham, the great control artist who walked only 23 men during the entire American League season, gave a base on balls to the first batter he faced.

BONHAM STARTS BADLY

Bonham threw three balls to Brown before he got a strike across at the start of the game and Brown ultimately was passed.

It was a costly mistake because Moore laid down a sacrifice bunt on the first pitch and when the big Yankee ace threw to second trying to head off the run, Brown beat the throw and both runners were safe.

Bonham got the next two hitters out, but Walker Cooper sliced a double over second base and the ball skidded tantalizingly all the way to the wall in right centre, both runners racing home.

Bonham settled down and allowed only two hits for the first six innings when he gave up a single by Johnny Hopp in the fourth.

Hopp rounded first and Cullenbine sought to trap him with a throw to Buddy Hassett. But as soon as Hopp saw where the ball was going he set sail for second, Hassett fumbled the throw, when it arrived, and no play was made on Hopp.

Hopp also caused trouble in the seventh when he shot another liner to right for what might have been the same sort of play.

McCARTHY PEEVED

Hopp again rounded first and the crowd taunted Cullenbine to throw to first but this time he kept the ball ahead of the runner. It didn't make any difference, as it turned out, because George (Whitey) Kurowski followed with a triple.

This hit infuriated Manager Joe McCarthy and his Yankees because it was a liner so close to the left field foul line that when the ball bounced out of Keller's glove it landed a few inches in foul territory. But Umpire George Magerkurth ruled it a fair ball, apparently judging that it was fair when

High School Bantam Football

Westglen Defeats Vic 7-5; Scona Rolls Over Sep 11-5

Westglen bantams hung up their second straight win in the High School bantam league as they turned back Coach Bill Mayson's Vic squad 7-5 in a game played at the winner's home grounds yesterday.

In another scheduled game played at Separate, Scona chalked up it's initial win of the season by edging out the Homesters 11-5.

A great fourth quarter rally by Westglen enabled them to turn seeming defeat into victory. At the end of three stanzas the losers held a five-point margin, but the West-enders began to roll from the start of the final quarter and were able to overcome this lead.

Wally Worth sent the Vic squad into an early first quarter lead as he fired a 30 yard pass to Jack Booth, who grabbed it out of the air and scampered over for a major count. The attempted convert was not good.

The second and third frames saw both clubs battle on even terms and neither was able to chalk up a point.

In the final canto the Westenders came to life with a bang. Eric MacDonald provided the spark to set off the dynamite as he rouged Bill Sharp. Minutes later Gordon Dahl plunged over the Vic goalline from seven yards out. Jack Brown kicked a convert and these points gave the winners their margin of victory.

SCONA TAKES EARLY LEAD AGAINST SEP.

In the Scona-Sep. encounter, the winners wasted no time in getting on the score board. At the five minute mark in the initial quarter, Bruce Cormack chalked up a touchdown as he went over the line after an extension run from the losers' 15-yard line. The attempted convert was blocked by Sep.

Just before the end of the second frame, Sep. were guilty of a bad fumble on their own five yard line. Nelles Christianson, South Side backfielder was in fast to pick up the loose pigskin and carry it the rest of the way for a precious five points. The convert, a pass by Cormack to Fee Brennan was good. This gave Scona an 11 point margin at half time.

The third quarter saw the teams battle scoreless and it was not until the dying minutes of the contest that the blue and white tallied as Len Maher flipped a 20 yard touchdown pass to Grant Defrain.

Christianson, Don Gerlitz, Brennan and Bruce Cormack played heads-up ball for the winners, while for the losers, Maher, Lavalles and Defrain played exceptionally well.

New Westminster Confident

Montreal All Hepped Up Over Coming Boxla Playoffs

MONTREAL, Oct. 2—(CP)—Lacrosse fever—something that hasn't hit this town since the days of those famous Shamrock teams two decades ago—has broken out again with the coming of the Dominion semi-final playdown between New Westminster Salmonbellies and Lachine-Ville St. Pierre.

The series opens at the nearby Lachine arena tonight with the second game of the best-of-three affair scheduled Sunday and a third game, if necessary, to be played Monday.

New Westminster was quietly confident on its arrival here yesterday that it would advance along the title trail which ends in Toronto. The winner of the series here takes on Mimico-Brampton, Ontario champions, in the Dominion final in a best-of-three series starting Oct. 7.

A. G. (Grumpy) Spring, manager of the coast sharpshooters, expressed the feeling of most of his players when he said: "We are not taking Lachine lightly. We figure we've got the team to win. Maybe we'll be disappointed or surprised but I don't think so."

Fourteen players made the trip east with the Salmonbellies, including five replacements allowed under the emergency rule permitting substitutes for players in the armed forces unable to get leave.

To Montreals the name Salmonbellies is synonomous with lacrosse, for they recall the outstanding New Westminster clubs which won the Dominion crown in 1937 by beating Orillia in the final and those teams of 1928 and 1932 which represented Canada in the Olympic games at Amsterdam and Los Angeles.

Youthful Jockey Seriously Injured

LAUREL, Md. Oct. 2.—(AP)—Jimmy Thornburg, sensational 17-year-old apprentice Indiana jockey who rode 27 winners at the recent Havre de Grace meeting, was reported in a serious condition last night after a four-horse spill in the third race at Laurel Thursday.

It was reported the young rider was suffering from a possible fractured skull and neck.

Thornburg, riding Lavann stable's Tiny Trick, fell under his mount and had to be pulled from Tiny Trick broke a leg and was destroyed.

Keller charged into it on a dead run.

This boosted the Cardinal lead to 3-0 and at the time it seemed all that Beazley would need. The young righthander had been hit intermittently, the Yankees getting runners on base in every one of the first five innings, but he worked himself out of these jams with the help of some fancy fielding by his teammates.

Then, in the eighth, the Bombers blasted.

YANKEES LASH OUT

Lollaebino hit a grounder which Brown managed only to knock down and it was scored as a single. Joe DiMaggio came through with a sharp line single to right to bring Cullenbine home.

Then Keller connected with Beazley's next pitch and the ball sailed high and far over the right field pavilion to knot the score.

Beazley fanned Joe Gordon to end the inning, but had another narrow escape in the ninth.

Bill Dickey led off with a single and Tuck Stainback was sent in to run for him. Buddy Hassett crashed another single into right and Slaughter made the most magnificent throw of the series, sending a strike to Kurowski in time to catch Stainback sliding into third.

Manager Billy Southworth held a hasty conference on the mound, but decided to let the freshman work out his own fate and he did it magnificently—making pinch-hitter Red Ruffing fly out and Rizuto ground out on easy chances.

Wrist Injured, Hitting Improves

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—Taft Wright attributes his swatting prowess to an accident.

"I was a pull hitter until I broke my wrist one day in the minor leagues," explains the Chicago White Sox outfielder. "When I got back into the game, I couldn't bring my bat around like I used to, and had to push the ball into left field. Pretty soon I got the hang of hitting to left, and I guess it adds 50 points to my batting average every year. It was a lucky break for me."

Wooderson Wins Mile

Canucks Defeat Britishers In Army Track, Field Meet

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Oct. 2—(CP)—Though their British army competitors raced to first place in seven of nine events, Canadian army track and field athletes outscored them 35-30 on a point basis in a recent meet held for the benefit of the British Red Cross.

The British Army's most impressive victory over the Canadians and a mixed British team was in the mile event, captured by Cpl. Sydney Wooderson, world outdoor champion.

The British Army won all but the running broad jump in which Capt. J. Kerr, of Kitchener, Ont., placed first, and the high jump won by Sgt. S. R. West of the Royal Air Force, competing for the mixed team.

Wooderson negotiated the mile race easily in four minutes, 22.8 seconds, more than three seconds ahead of A. H. Pettet, Metropolitan Police champion.

In the broad jump, Capt. Kerr achieved 20 feet, 10¾ inches, eight inches better than Lieut. M. A. Martin of Kelowna, B.C., who was second.

R.S.M. C. B. Holmes, British empire sprint champion, running for the British Army, won both the 100 and 220-yard events. He was chased to the tape both times by Cpl. G. Bortolussi of Powell River, B.C.

Cpl. R. R. Hurley of Penticton, B.C., gave the Canadian team third place in the 100 yards and Rfmn. D. G. Denniel of Valmarie, Sask., was third in the 220.

In the 880 yards, Cpl. J. Dee, of the British Army, won in two minutes, eight seconds, leading G. H. Morris of the Metropolitan Police. Pte. R. Mirabo of Calgary, Alta., and L.-Cpl. O. E. Wager, Hanley, Sask.

The students unanimously approved the handing of an ultimatum to the board of education demanding the return of sports to the board of education and if no action is taken this afternoon will stage a school walk-out.

Cubs Lose Again To White Sox in Chicago Playoff

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—(AP)—The White Sox made it two in a row in the Chicago city series here Thursday when they whipped the Cubs at Wrigley Field, 9-5, before a small gathering of 3,320.

Lon Warneke was driven to cover with a four-run barrage in the eighth inning after the White Sox had moved up to a 5-5 tie in the previous round.

Eddie Smith started for the American Leaguers but was knocked out in three innings as the Cubs took a 5-3 lead. Joe Haynes then took over for the White Sox and hurled shutout ball the rest of the way.

Don Kolloway led the 11-hit White Sox attack with a homer and three singles to tally four runs and drive home two more. Chicago (AL) 300 100 140—9 11 3

Curtailed Hours For Sale of Gas Sought at Coast

VANCOUVER, Oct. 2—(CP)—Officials of the Retail Merchants' Association, British Columbia division, said yesterday that Vancouver gasoline service station operators will request the city council to pass a bylaw prohibiting sale of gas and oil except between the hours of 8 a.m. and 6 p.m.

This would cut the hours from the present operating time of service stations which now open at 7 a.m. and close at 7 p.m.

The Retail Merchants' Association officials said many stations here are operating with reduced staffs which make it impossible to give their former type of customer service.

Canada Launching Merchant Vessel Every Three Days

OTTAWA, Oct. 2—(CP)—Canada now is launching merchant ships at the rate of one every three days, munitions and supply officials said yesterday.

This week the 51st of the 10,000-ton cargo vessels being produced in Canada was completed and only one of them was completed in 1941.

Canada has contracts for nearly 300 of these ships as well as a number of 4,700-ton vessels which are to be produced on the East coast. The larger ships are being built largely in West coast shipyards.

In all, 21 major shipyards and 58 smaller yards are engaged in the shipbuilding program, which includes construction of a number of naval ships.

Yesterday's Win Gives Cardinals Lots of Confidence

By GALE TALBOT

EN ROUTE WITH WORLD SERIES TEAMS, Oct. 2—(AP)—St. Louis Cardinals felt they at least had those "unbeatable" New York Yankees badly worried today as the two world series rivals rolled toward Yankee Stadium and a resumption of hostilities tomorrow.

From the way the Cards were taking on over their 4-3 victory in yesterday's second game at St. Louis and the plans they were making for taking the Yanks over the hurdles the next three days on their home grounds, anyone would have thought Billy Southworth's scrappy youngsters were at least a couple of games in front instead of merely having deadlocked the play-off at a victory apiece.

Ford Frick, National league president, attached great significance to the fact that McCarthy stalked out frequently to complain of decisions in yesterday's defeat, and that he was sore as a wet hen because George Kurowski's timely triple that scored the Cardinals' third run was ruled a fair ball.

"Ordinarily Joe doesn't leave that dugout three times a season," Frick said. "When he starts arguing the way he did yesterday you can bet he has something on his mind besides a baseball cap."

The Cards were inclined to think they had got in a jab on the Yanks that would rankle and fester and bring important results in the remaining games when Ena's (counter) Slaughter dashed on to third after slugging his double off Ernie Bonham in the eighth inning. The Yanks for the moment looked slightly bewildered, the Cards declared, recalling that Shortstop Phil Rizzuto let a simple throw-in go through him on the play.

For all the 23-year-old Beazley's stout-hearted pitching in the pinches yesterday (the Yankees had men on base in every inning except two), the consensus in the club car last night was that Slaughter gave the outstanding performance in the Cardinals' triumph.

Coal Output Slumps

GLACE BAY, N.S., Oct. 2—(CP)—An 11,500-ton slump in production at Dominion Coal Company's 10 Cape Breton collieries was reported yesterday for September, compared with August output. The pits turned out 278,859 tons in September.

The War Today

BY JOHN COLLINGWOOD READE

It seems to me that Walter Lippmann, who has just returned to New York from a protracted visit to the British Isles, put his finger on a vital point concerning the forthcoming offensive. Mr. Lippmann points out that the Anglo-American combination is undergoing a transition from the defensive to the offensive.

In the case of Britain, the change is particularly radical, because Britain has been in the war since the beginning, and has remained for nearly two years in the very shadow of the enemy's armed might. So long as Britain was compelled to look first to her own defenses and then to the defenses of those territories committed to her charge which were vital to the cause of the United Nations, her course of action and the nature of her weapons were selected by the enemy, or at least by the circumstances which he imposed.

Now, the British must transform their forces and the Americans organize theirs in accordance with some plan for imposing conditions of our choosing upon the enemy. For the first time, we are giving very serious thought to the question of what tools and what methods best serve the special character of the island peoples of North America and Britain.

A VITAL TRANSFORMATION

There is no doubt that, measured by the shrinking scale of space value which the modern airplane has forced upon us, North America can be regarded, like Australia, as a rather large island. The British and American peoples are not military powers in the sense that they are situated in a great land mass which is self-contained economically and is shared by their enemies. The Germans and the Russians are, and they have consequently developed powerful engines of war for use on land, and built military roads, organized transport and trained men with the fixed idea that the fate of their nations depends upon their abilities to take and occupy, or prevent the capture of, territory.

That is not the point of view which has governed British or American military thinking. Both have been naval powers. The United States, being more or less economically self-contained and being by so far the largest power in the Western hemisphere that a challenge to her interests supported by force could not be thought of, invariably referred to her armed forces as "defenses" and gave pride and place to her navy as the watchdog of her ocean gates.

Leaving the Pacific war out of the calculations for the moment, American forces for service in Europe must be patterned to suit the special conditions created by Britain. Britain is the operating base, and the special genius of the British, where the whole civil population is serving the front line, is of prime military consideration.

FUNCTION OF AIR POWER

Britain, too, is a naval power and has built her air strength as a corollary to the concept of sea power. Admiral Mahan has laid down an axiom which has not successfully been challenged, that "who rules the sea lanes controls the world" and Britain has come to understand that the control of the sea lanes is impossible without air power, and that air power is, in any event, an extension of sea power.

The problem now is whether the new Anglo-American offensive is to be fought with air and sea power as the primary weapon, having land forces in support, or whether the strategy should contemplate ground forces as the principal vehicle of power, bolstered and protected by aircraft and warships.

The point is not as academic as it sounds. It involves the whole concept of offensive strategy. As Mr. Lippmann puts it, "A short description of this basic question is whether the strategical plan of the Allied offensive shall be determined by the air marshals or by the generals."

In the last war the Germans were beaten by sea power. The Allied armies, which were preponderantly French, offered a stout resistance to the forces of the Central Powers, primarily German, but they never showed signs of being able to master the enemy on the field. The German collapse was brought about by progressive economic exhaustion directly attributable to the British naval blockade, while the crisis was precipitated when the Americans arrived and the enemy saw a new and limitless reservoir of material and resources placed at the Allies' disposal.

COUNTER-BLOCKADE FAILED

This war is different. The Germans moved swiftly in the initial stages to vitiate the effects of the naval blockade by bringing under their jurisdiction and control enough contiguous territory to furnish the material requirements of war with little recourse to the outside world. Their plans, worked out ahead of time, also envisaged turning the tables on the naval powers by a counter-blockade supplied through the concerted use of submarines and aircraft.

This plan nearly succeeded, and might have but for the thought that had been given to anti-submarine warfare and counter-submarine protection by the Admiralty during the intervening years. But the ascendancy of Allied air power is restoring to the United Nations the weapon which the Germans thought to snatch from their grasp through the acquisition of British territory. The naval blockade, supplemented by the air offensive, can accomplish the same economic results which were obtained by the navy alone in the years between 1914 and 1918.

Russia is playing the part that France played in the last war, and it is a mark of Russian military realism that they refer to the Battle of Stalingrad as the Verdun of the present war.

NATURE OF ATTACK PROBLEM

We cannot guarantee an early victory by the application of air power alone, or by the use of sea and air power in co-ordination. But we must decide whether the main object is to beat Hitler's armies in the fields and take physical possession of Germany, or whether we propose to pulverize the German industrial complex and deprive the armies of the means through which they operate, as well as the interests they are fighting to serve.

Ground forces may be necessary for the speedy and complete fulfilment of this ultimate objective. The main strategy in such case would not be conceived by generals. The air marshals have already made it clear that they have a design for victory which they think would do the job thoroughly. In their view ground operations would be directed at special tasks. An expeditionary force landed in Europe might be necessary as a diversion move or relieving operation to take the pressure off the Russian army if it became unendurable, or it would become necessary, in any event, as a sort of mopping-up operation and the advance arm of the law.

But if the forthcoming offensive is to be military in character, then the strategy must be conceived by the generals, who will look to the air services both for military co-operation and the fulfilment of essentially military purposes, with strategic bombing as an auxiliary softening-up process.

This strategy brings Allied force to bear on the other end of German power — the fighting men of Germany, instead of those for whom they fight and who provide them with the means to fight. The emphasis, in other words, shifts, and with it the whole approach to the problem.

It may already have been decided who is to be the architect, and whether we are going to challenge the enemy with his own weapons or force upon him conditions of war with which he is less familiar and methods at which he is less adept. The answer, however, will profoundly affect the proportions in which weapons are made and the priorities accorded the various arms and divisions of the service.

There must, in any event, be a diversion of some kind on the ground itself to relieve the pressure on the Red Army. Air attack, on whatever scale, cannot be counted on to weaken the blows presently struck against Russia. The reason is that, were every factory in Germany to be put out of operation tomorrow, the stores and replacements accumulated for the present campaign would already be sufficient and available at base headquarters behind the Eastern Front to support the Germany Army in action for some weeks to come.

RUSSIANS ARE ATTACKING

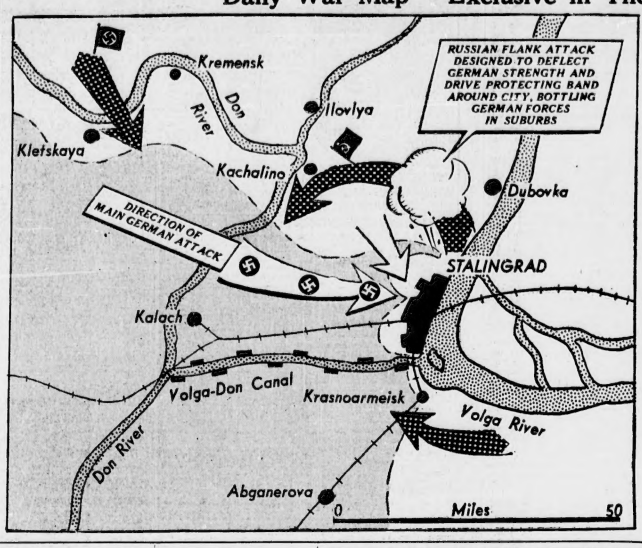

German factories are a long way from being put out of action, and no one doubts the capacity of the German Army to continue in action until next summer.

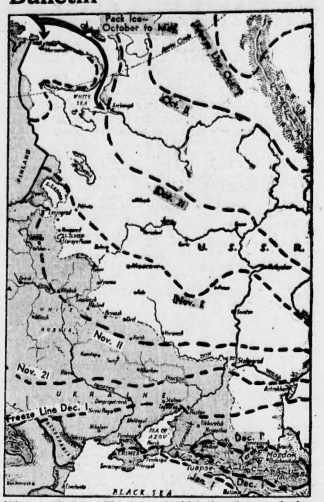

On the fighting fronts, the processes already noted are continuing to develop. Around Stalingrad, the Russians are attacking southward along a fifty-mile front between the Don and the Volga north of the city. The attack is aimed at the flank of the main German forces driving eastward from across the Don into the very heart of this metropolitan centre. Russian forces inside the Don bend are also increasing their efforts to penetrate German-held territory and cut the stream of supplies moving up to the attackers.

On the Central Front, and at Leningrad, the Russians hold the initiative, while in the Caucasus they are holding their positions firmly.

The accompanying map illustrates the broad outlines of the German operation, but the fighting is too confused and the details released by Moscow to meagre to attempt a detailed graphic study of the battle.

Four Sisters Join R.C.A.F.: Act as Cooks

There'll be no hunger in the R.C.A.F. if the Murphy family of Rochester can prevent it and there are enough of them to prevent it.

Which is another way of breaking the news that four members of the family are now serving as cooks in the women's division of the R.C.A.F.

Peggy May Murphy, fourth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Murphy, of the Rochester district, left Wednesday night for No. 7 "M" depot at Rockliffe, Ont.

Others now serving as cooks in the air force are: Leading Aircwoman Molly Horning, formerly Molly Murphy, now at No. 15 Service Flying school, Claresholm; Airwoman Linda Murphy, at No. 7, S.F.T.S., MacLeod; Airwoman Rita Murphy, No. 2 Bombing and Gunnery school, Mossbank, Sask.

Molly enlisted nine months ago, while Linda and Rita joined up together about five months ago.

FATHER SERVED

The father, Patrick Murphy, served in the first Great War and draws a pension as a result.

The Murphy girls are practical cooks, having learned the art on their farm home at Rochester. They feel certain that too many cooks from one family will make the broth even better it, defiance of the old saw about spoiling the broth.

The following 12 girls left for Rockcliffe "M" depot Wednesday.

Mobden, M. G., Armistice; Baron, M. M., Mundare; Russell, M. N., Edmonton; MacDonald M. H., Edmonton; Robinson, I. M. T., Edmonton; Smith, K. M., Edmonton; Englund, M., Provost; McKercher, E., Edmonton; Murray, F. E., Edmonton; Ashbey, N. E., Colinton; Murphy, P. M., Rochester; Nicholson, H., Edmonton.

Nine Truckers Assessed Fines For Overloads

Nine truckers were fined in city police court Thursday for overloading their vehicles while hauling supplies in and out of the city. The truckers were checked up by the R.C.M.P. highway traffic patrol working under the direction of Corporal James Muir.

The truckers pleaded guilty before Magistrate Harold Hawe, K.C. who fined each one $10 and costs with an optional jail sentence of 15 days. Twenty-six other motorists appeared before Magistrate Hawe Thursday afternoon.

Those fined for overloading their trucks were Hardy Keen, Frank Woolston, E. Jones, Steven Johnson, Cliff Miske and L. B. Rogers, all of Edmonton, and J. Minchin, Dawn Dove and D. G. McCullough of Calgary.

GIVEN THREE FINES

Stevenson was fined another $10 and costs for failing to display his Highway Traffic Board certificate and faced the magistrate for the third time to be fined $10 and costs for carrying a load wider than the regulations permit.

Edward Raymond, Edmonton, was fined $25 and costs for exceeding the truck speed limit and received another fine of $20 and costs for failing to stop at a railway crossing.

This was Raymond's third offence on the speeding count.

George Nonticos, Edmonton, Reinhodt Arndt, Leduc, and Alex F. Bowles, Edmonton, were each fined $10 and costs for failing to display prominently their trucking certificates.

Peter Tomyn, Wostok, and Philip Rawsey, Edgerton, were each fined $15 and costs for exceeding speed limits and Lee Dumphy and William Edmonds, received $10 fines and $10 and costs for similar offences.

Improper flares and safety lighting brought a fine of $10 and costs against Horace Bell, Edmonton, and insufficient brake equipment brought a fine of $3 and costs against Harvey Bode of this city.

For operating a truck that was not labelled with the owner's name and address Hardy Keen paid a fine of $10 and costs, and Thorald Christianson, Ponoka, paid a $2 and costs fine for driving a taxi without a chauffeur's license.

Ian Farquhar, Edmonton, was fined $20 and costs after pleading guilty to a charge of dangerous driving on the Jasper-Edmonton highway.

Private Trucks Only Will Come Under New Order

Only Private commercial vehicle trucks which are not certificated with the Highway Traffic Board, will be affected by the Dominion government order A314 which will go into effect across Canada Nov. 1. Jack Taylor, secretary of the Alberta Motor Transport Association stated Friday.

Mr. Taylor stated that the order is designed to restrict the operation of non-essential trucks and in no way will interfere with trucks that are certificated with the Highway Traffic Board, as from August 1, 1942.

He stated that the office of the association has been deluged with inquiries regarding the incoming order and wishes to point out that it will not affect in any way the operation of public service vehicle trucks.

Driver to be Tried For Manslaughter

Mike Yaecyko, Vilna, Alta., was remanded for trial in police court Thursday, charged with manslaughter as the result of a fatal accident on the Edmonton-Calgary highway, two miles south of Kavanaugh, September 18.

Yaecyko was the driver of an auto that struck and killed instantly Hugh Ross, 76-year-old farmer of Kavanagh. Ross was crossing the highway from his home to his field when he was struck by Yaecyko's car.

Yaecyko waived preliminary hearing when he appeared before Magistrate Hawe Thursday and will appear in supreme court later this fall.

ROAD REPORT

A.M.A. Safety Slogan: Double parking is dangerous and is hogging the road.

Friday's road report: There is a clear outlook at Edson, Cherhill, Barrhead, Rochester, Lac la Biche, Waskatenau, St. Paul and Chauvin, and roads are good. Two Hills and Hay Lakes report clear weather but rough roads.

At Viking and Czar it is cloudy, roads are good. Roads are rough at Rimbey and Thorsby, weather is cloudy. Bashaw, Athabasca and Peace River are having clear weather and good roads.

Vital Needs of Labor Industry Are Expounded

The question of rehabilitation of men as they return from fields of war, now and after the hostilities; and the relation of this rehabilitation program to industry was dealt with, in an address Dr. George Weir, Ottawa, acting director of training, department of pensions and national health, delivered to members of the Edmonton branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, at a meeting in the Macdonald hotel Thursday evening.

J. A. Tupper, chairman of the Edmonton branch, presided.

Other guest speakers were R. F. Miller, of the priorities branch of the department of munitions and supply, who dealt with recent priority changes and priority applications by men in industry and distribution; and W. D. King, deputy minister of trade and industry and vice-chairman of the Alberta regional war labor board, who spoke on the War Labor Board program and its effect upon labor in Alberta.

DISCUSS PROBLEMS

George E. Carpenter, secretary of the prairie division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, who since the outbreak of war has been acting as trade representative for the prairie provinces at Ottawa dealt individually with problems the members presented to him after the meeting.

Dr. Weir presented a picture of the industry and labor situation in Canada today to outline to the members the need for a gigantic program of vocational training of thousands of Canadian young men and women, that must be undertaken at once.

He stated that at the present time there are many doubts and misgivings on the part of industry and of the various training authorities regarding an undertaking of such gigantic magnitude. He emphasized, however, that in spite of these doubts, the problem must be tackled immediately if unnecessary social upheaval and chaos is to be avoided after the war.

First practical step in the direction of maintaining a basis of prosperity of at least the 1939 level now and after the war, is to ask industry, universities, governments and other institutions for an inventory of vocational training and employment opportunities, he stated.

TAKE INVENTORY

Under this arrangement, industry, with the co-operation of the rehabilitation and reconstruction committees, would probably be willing to make an inventory (more reliable than mere guess work) of vocational training and employment opportunities; the various governments (dominion, provincial, municipal) of corresponding civil service opportunities; the universities of professional opportunities; labor of employment conditions and opportunities; the various city school systems would probably make an appraisal of educational contributions they can make through the use of their staffs, equipment, buildings, etc., for training purposes. Provincial Departments of Education can make an appraisal of the vocational training capacities of the provinces, Dr. Weir suggested.

He outlined a resolution passed at the annual meeting of the Canada and Newfoundland Education Association asking for a system of collaboration between universities and industry with a view of establishing a training system for vocational guidance personnel.

The personnel would be drawn from industry, welfare departments, unemployment, divisions and so on and would be instructed in methods of guidance and training of discharged persons, especially in the post-war era.

Training facilities should be canvassed in good time and arrangements should be made with the personnel managers of industry, agriculture and professions for the placement and supervision of trainees until they have obtained their proper occupational niche, Dr. Weir declared.

TEACHER SHORTAGE

Teacher shortage is a critical problem which confronts both civilian and military authorities. Steps towards its solution are being considered; but the situation promises to become serious, especially in the rehabilitation field where many technical and professional instructors will be required, he declared.

Dr. Weir's address was selected by the committee recently meeting the Edmonton branch of the C.M.A. to work in collaboration with university heads and school officials in an effort to bring out the practical aspects of industry into vocational education.

W. D. King, vice-chairman of the regional war labor board in Alberta, showed how to date the wartime prices and trade under Donald Gordon and the ministry of labor under Humphrey Mitchell has achieved, by and large, its objective of stemming inflation.

CONSIDER WAR NEEDS

He spoke of the problems confronting the war labor board and urged the manufacturers to do all possible towards alleviating the problems, by placing themselves into the proper categories according to the importance of their industry with respect to war needs, and attempting to give active consideration to training men and women, particularly those of non-military age, to carry forward the work of their respective establishments.

Alberta District News In Brief

Naval Officer On Fast Trip From Iceland

LACOMBE. — Lieut.-Commander W. G. Dolmage, R.C.N.V.R., Vancouver, was a visitor in Lacombe over the week-end after making a fast trip from Iceland to Alberta. Leaving Iceland on Tuesday morning, Lieut. Dolmage went by airplane to Montreal, took a train to Toronto, where he boarded another airplane which landed him in Lethbridge Friday night. From Lethbridge, the naval officer engaged a taxi for a fast trip to Calgary, where he was joined by Mrs. Dolmage for the trip to Lacombe by train.

In Lacombe, Lieut. and Mrs. Dolmage were visitors with A. T. Inskip and Miss Alice Inskip. They left on Saturday afternoon for their home in Vancouver.

In Dieppe Raid

Capt. W. R. Hoag, Rimbey, a member of an armored unit overseas, who participated in the recent Dieppe raid. In a letter home he wrote: "Once we were there I wish we could have stayed."

With Those In Uniform

RIMBEY—Pte. Joseph Donnelly, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Donnelly, Bluffton, has written home from overseas to say that the hospital unit with which he is an ambulance driver had a busy time after the Dieppe raid.

It was Pte. Donnelly's duty to drive back and forth over a distance of 50 miles with the returning men, many of whom were wounded. He says the Canadians were all in good spirit and "would gladly do it again tomorrow—that's what we came over here for and that's what we want."

Capt. W. R. Hoag, Rimbey, a member of the armored brigade, also wrote in the same strain. "Once we were there I wish we could have stayed," he said in his letter.

Miss Audrey Smith of the C.W.A.C., has arrived home to spend two weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith of the Monte Vista district. She is serving as a dietician at an army centre at Dafoe, Sask.

LACOMBE — LAC. Tom Ford, Toronto, has arrived home for a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Ford.

Gleaned From Rural News

LACOMBE — Const. George Threlfell, who is stationed in the R.C.M.P. training school at Regina, has arrived home to spend a holiday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Threlfell. . . . Charles Simpson, manager of the Jenkins' groceteria at Banff, has been transferred to Lacombe and will arrive shortly with his family to take over his new duties. Robert Ross, who has managed the local store for the firm for many years, is leaving to take over the High River branch store. At the last meeting of the Lions' Club he was presented with a pen and pencil set by the members in appreciation of the work he has done for that organization.

HANNA — Two miscellaneous showers were given last week for Mrs. Howard Sloan (nee Ida Marie Wittchen). Mrs. Godfried Wittchen, mother of the bride, gave one at her home. The Hanna hospital maids staff, of which Mrs. Sloan is a recent member, gave the other at the home of Mrs. Lawrence Oliver. . . . Early this week Mrs. Roy Wolff fell down stairs and broke her collar bone. . . . Cases of whooping cough are increasing and several adults have the flu.

93 - Year - Old Keeping Busy With Harvest

LACOMBE. — Harmon Zielie, pioneer of the Lacombe district, is turning in a nice job of harvesting at the farm of his son, Charles Zielie, despite the fact that he has passed his 93rd birthday. While he makes no claim that he can keep pace with the younger stookers on the farm, Mr. Zielie is hard at work in the fields almost every day and seldom stops for a rest.

Whitecourt Gets Salvage Service

WHITECOURT — In response to a letter from L. H. Baxter, chairman of the local salvage committee, outlining the difficulties of salvage organizations in outlying districts that have no elevators, a communication has just been received from Wartime Salvage Ltd., Ottawa, stating that a car will be spotted here on the C.N.R. siding on or about November 20th to load scrap material.

The car will then stop at other points between here and Edmonton to complete its load. A rate of $7 per ton will be paid for all scrap loaded on this car.

Confirmation At Wainwright

WAINWRIGHT — Last Sunday 41 children and three adults participated in a confirmation service conducted by Archbishop J. H. MacDonald, of the Roman Catholic diocese of Edmonton, at the Blessed Sacrament church. The archbishop also conducted the mass before the examination and confirmation.

Rev. L. A. Braillant, Cadomin, has been appointed to the St. Thomas Anglican church here. He will commence his duties Sunday.

Miss Bessie Sheridan and Miss Norma Johnson entertained recently in honor of Miss Enid Dahl who is leaving for Drumheller to take a position with the treasury branch. Mr. McGarvey is the new Kiwanis district governor-elect and conductor of the club's glee club, while Mr. Strachan is the arranger of most of the "tangled tunes" or medleys, in the singing of which the club has gained wide fame.

Teachers' Wage Scale Disputed By Vegreville

Notification has been received by John W. Barnett, secretary-manager of the Alberta Teachers' Association, to the effect that the Vegreville divisional board has not accepted the rulings of the Board of Arbitration with respect to the amount of salary teachers of the division are to be paid.

The communication was forwarded by the school board secretary to James McCrea, president of the Vegreville A.T.A. Local, who in turn forwarded it to the A.T.A. head office.

PAID BY SCHEDULE

The letter informed the teachers through their local president that they will be paid in accordance with the salary schedule adopted by the board on July 25, which is based on a basic minimum of $840.

The majority of the board of arbitration ruled that the teachers be paid on a basic minimum of $925 for teachers of grades one to nine; $1,025 for teachers of intermediate plus high school; and $1,300 for high school teachers.

The Board secretary explained further that the board had granted the $50 optional allowance for supervision of all teachers of senior rooms and that ten teachers who hold second class certificates had been granted "first class status" for increment purposes.

In commenting on the decision of the Vegreville board, Mr. Barnett stated that their action was in direct contravention of previous understandings effected between the board and the A.T.A.

Many teachers remained in the Vegreville division solely on the prospect of getting paid according to the findings and rulings of the board of arbitration, Mr. Barnett stated.

Furthermore, it was with the approval of the Vegreville board that the A.T.A. asked for the board of arbitration to participate in settling the dispute. Their action by refuting the board's decision disrupts the whole purpose of arbitration board sittings, he declared.

Of all disputes in trades and industries that have been settled by boards of arbitration in the province, their rulings have been ignored only by school boards, Mr. Barnett charged. All other employer-employee groups accepted the rulings of this independent body, Mr. Barnett declared.

Teachers in the Vegreville division have met at Vegreville, Manville and Innisfree to discuss the matter and have strongly protested the board's action. Further action on the part of the teachers has been deferred till after the matter is discussed at their fall convention this month.

It is estimated that Japan suffers four minor earthquake shocks every day.

"Racing" Publisher Nabbed in Closet With $16,000 Cash

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—(AP)—Thomas J. Ryan, described by police as the successor to the late M. L. Annenberg's racing news business, was seized in a police raid yesterday as he crouched in a closet with a valise containing $16,000 in cash beside him.

He was one of 10 men nabbed in two simultaneous raids in connection with what police termed "a $1,000,000-a-year" wire service for bookmakers. All were booked on conspiracy charges and later released in $1,000 bail each.

Gas, Tire Laws Passed to Keep "Cars Rolling"

Nation-wide gasoline rationing and speed limit regulations now in effect in Canada and the United States have been enforced primarily for the purpose of keeping the motor vehicles equipped with sufficient rubber to "keep rolling", R. A. Godson, president of the Edmonton branch of the Alberta Motor Association stated Friday.

Mr. Godson was commenting on a communication he received from the public relations department of the American Automobile Association, which outlined in detail the present situation in America regarding the prospects of rubber for tires.

He stated that a tire replenishment program is now a reality in the United States and that as a result of the program it is expected that motorists will be able to operate their vehicles without interruption.

TO RELEASE RUBBER

Mr. Godson stated that the program calls for the releasing to the motoring public of 138,000 tons of reclaim rubber, the using of one to two thousand tons of crude rubber and the stepping up of production of certain rubber substitutes, such as thiokol.

The A.M.A. head pointed out that in Canada as well as in the United States the mists of confusion have been cleared away and a definite "blueprint" of action has been established. The green light has been set for the promotest possible action, he declared.

NEED 150 POLL OFFICIALS

Preparations Are Under Way for Municipal Election

Last Meeting Present City Council Oct. 26; Close Contests Likely

First signs of the annual municipal election to be held Nov. 12 were evident at the city hall Friday when Alfred Russell, returning officer and city clerk, received applications for work as deputy returning officers and poll clerks.

Mr. Russell said that applications are being made this year a considerable time later than in previous years, and added that, with the considerable amount of employment available in the city, it may be difficult to obtain the required 150 deputy returning officers and poll clerks.

The last meeting of the present city council will be held on Oct. 26, with nomination day for the election set for Nov. 2. The election will be held on Thursday, Nov. 12.

Mayor John W. Fry has announced he will seek re-election as an Independent. The retiring aldermen this year are: A. Bisset, S. S. Bowcott, F. J. Mitchell, J. H. Ogilvie and S. Parsons, all elected on the Citizens' Committee ticket.

Retiring members of the public school board are E. M. Gunderson, W. G. McConachie and Mrs. W. J. Ross, Citizens' Committee nominees, and from the Separate school board, A. J. Crowe, J. O'Hara, and J. O. Pilon.

Possibility of acclamations in the election was eliminated when the Labor-C.C.F. organization announced intention of entering a slate of candidates. It has not been determined yet whether a full slate of aldermanic, school trustee and mayoralty candidates will be nominated. The party will hold a nominating convention at the I.O.O.F. hall late in October.

EARLY MEETING

The Citizens' Committee will likely hold an executive meeting early next week, and it is expected that from this meeting will come an announcement that a meeting of Citizens' Committee supporters be called to determine whether or not the organization will function in the November election.

The Civic Progressive Association, with two members, Ald. Mrs. J. A. Clarke and Ald. Guy Patterson, K.C., continuing on council for another year, is expected to announce election plans early next week.

Honored in East

A. M. MacDonald, president of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, who was elected by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce at its annual meeting at the Seigniory Club, Que., to the post of vice-president. Accompanying Mr. MacDonald to the meeting were Reg. T. Rose, executive secretary of the Edmonton Chamber; A. L. Burrows and Francis G. Winspear.

Getting Around with Jack DeLong

Don't be surprised if Japanese cities receive some real blasting from heavy U.S. bombers before many more months have passed. And the planes carrying the "pay loads" for Tokyo and other points of interest in Japan may take off from bases in the Aleutians and return without landing elsewhere.

It is hinted in a U.S. aviation magazine that Flying Fortresses are having more gas tanks added at the expense of bomb load. According to the article, such improvision will increase the range of these aerial battle wagons sufficiently to permit round-trips to Japan proper from Alaskan bases.

It is expected to make up by number of machines the differences in weight of explosives sacrificed for extra fuel.

A rumpus has been raised in Canadian circles at Washington because of the poor publicity given R.C.A.F. planes and airmen who participated in a recent raid on Kiska Island in the Aleutians. The complaint is, that at a time when

Civil Service Step Explained

Persons applying or employment in the provincial civil service are not required to make application for positions through the National Selective Service Board, it was explained Friday by Mark W. Robertson, civil service commissioner for the Alberta government.

Applications may be made direct to the commissioner at the Legislative Buildings, Mr. Robertson declared. He said some confusion existed regarding the procedure in applying for positions with the provincial government.

"It is not necessary for a person seeking work in the provincial civil service to make application to the National Selective Service Board," he said. "Such application may be made direct to my office in the Legislative Buildings."

Upward Trend City Business Revealed Here

Growth of business in Edmonton through increased wartime activity is reflected in the sharp upswing in bank clearings for the eight months period ended Aug. 31, 1942 compared with the corresponding period last year.

Clearings for the 1942 period amounted to $201,871,553 against $165,314,735 last year, an increase of $36,556,817. The increase in bank clearings continued throughout September, and it is anticipated that when figures for the 1942 nine-month period are available, the increase will be well above the $40,000,000 mark.

Keeping pace with the increased business are other civic activities with tax collections for the nine-months period this year totalling $3,560,659.68 compared with $3,445,165.51 last year, an increase of $115,494.17.

Sales of city owned land show an increase for the 1942 period of $22,681, climbing from $212,341 to $235,022.78, while rentals collected this year during the nine-months period amounted to $120,904.87 compared with $120,470.42 last year.

PERMITS INCREASE

Despite restrictions in the supply of lumber and other supplies, building permits issued during the nine-months period amounted to $2,799,935 compared with $2,258,128, last year, an increase of $541,827.

Public utilities for the eight months period this year earned a gross income of $3,648,384 compared with $3,311,712, with a net surplus on operation of $677,579 against $681,017 for the eight-months period last year.

Telephone users increased from 20,565 to 21,773; waterworks department patrons from 19,450 to 19,876 and electric light consumers from 25,109 to 26,095.

Power production increased from 50,195,400 to 55,126,600 kilowatt hours.

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

The Inquiring Reporter sought reactions to the Dominion government's order-in-council limiting the number of statutory holidays to six each year.

THE ANSWERS

TERENCE MULCAHAY, cabinet maker: I guess the purpose of the order is to increase production, and to remove any basis for disputes as to double pay. It is limited for the war's duration, but there is a distinct possibility that some of the changes will continue when the guns are still silent.

• • •

PETER JACKSON, clerk: The change in date of Dominion Day will meet with the approval of most people. A week-end holiday is more than twice as valuable from a recreational and health point of view, as a holiday in the middle of the week, and interrupts business less. We may find this change so beneficial that we will demand its perpetuation.

• • •

WILLIAM KENNEDY, farmer: The six holidays a year seems to me to be a good deal. It will not affect us much on the farms. The dropping of certain of the holidays has been long overdue, but after the war Remembrance Day must be revived. We must have a day when the two world wars are remembered; a day on which we will honor our dead and determine that never again shall we permit mawkish sentiment to leave us at the mercy of aggressor nations.

Visitor Praises Fighting Services

Morale of Canadian and United States airmen and soldiers in Alaska is extremely high, according to Capt. F. Guy Armitage, M.C., Toronto, who returned to Edmonton after a tour of northern depots.

He is travelling under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. War Services and stages a one man show depicting characters from Charles Dickens novels. Thursday evening he staged a show at No. 3 (M) Depot, R.C.A.F. here.

Since the war began he has travelled more than 50,000 miles given his show in camps in Canada and the United States.

This is his first visit to Edmonton, and he expressed admiration for its magnificent setting. He predicted a great future for the city, seeing it as the gateway to a great international airway and highway in the near future.

• • •

Joseph Dill, former star baseball player in the Edmonton City League, now a partner in the large new hotel being built at Fort St. John, arrived here Friday on a C.P. Air Lines plane. He is purchasing supplies for the new hotel, which is a three-storey structure, and reports an unprecedented building boom in Fort St. John.

The race is to raise funds for war activities of the Rotary Club and the junior chamber of commerce. The air force band will be in attendance.

Cosmopolitan Club Forwards 'Smokes' to Boys

Canada's faithful legions, the boys in the armed forces serving their country overseas, will have more good Canadian cigarettes now.

Through the efforts of Edmonton's Cosmopolitan Club, 240,000 will be forwarded through the Overseas Tobacco League in Toronto to northern Alberta boys in the armed forces overseas.

The Edmonton Cosmopolitan Club raised $600 net through the "Old Timers" baseball game held at Renfrew Park last summer. Cigarettes are being sent at the rate of 80,000 each month and by the end of November the full 240,000 will have been forwarded.

With each packet of 25, an insert card bearing the name of the Cosmopolitan Club is enclosed, affording the recipient an opportunity to acknowledge the gift. Co-operating to the fullest extent, the Overseas Tobacco League has assured the club of proper distribution among our boys. This patriotic gesture is only one of the Cosmopolitan Club's many fine goodwill efforts. For many years the club has devoted much of its time raising money for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

On Saturday night the Cosmopolitan Club's annual banquet will see the installation of new officers and C. L. Olsen as president. It will be held at the Corona hotel.

Two Arrested After Break-Ins Are Reported

Two break-ins of city homes were reported to city police Friday morning, and in both instances quick action by members of Edmonton's police force, resulted in the arrest of two men.

A charge of being in possession of stolen property was laid against Anthony Schlosser, Prince of Wales Armory when police found in his possession several pieces of jewelry that answered the description of articles stolen from the home of Harry W. J. Maddison, 11929 100 avenue, between 8:15 and 12:30 Thursday night.

Mr. Maddison returned home at 12:30 a.m. Friday to find his home had been entered through a rear bedroom window and that jewelry had been taken.

Found missing were four gold tie pins, two rings, a cluster of diamonds, four gold souvenirs, diamond and pearl dress shirt studs, some crowns, florins, cigarettes, cuff links and currency.

HAD ARTICLES

Much of the property was found in possession of Schlosser, who was arrested and charged with being in possession of stolen property.

A ransacking of the home of Mrs. Esther Stochinsky, 9355 103 avenue, failed to result in any loss of property. Mrs. Stochinsky was awakened at 4:30 a.m. Friday by a noise in the kitchen of her home.

By the time she came down the prowler had slipped into the basement and made his escape through the coal chute.

Constables Gardiner and Gerlitz responded and arrested and charged Joseph Nichols, 10147 95 street, after a chase of several blocks.

Nicholas was arrested and charged with burglary after his torn and soiled clothing as well as fresh skin abrasions were likely evidence of his escape through the coal chute.

Both pleaded guilty to the charges when they appeared in city police court before Magistrate A. L. Millar, K.C., Friday.

Schlosser was remanded for sentence till next Tuesday, and Nicholls received a remand till Oct. 9.

Women Advised Face War's Grim Reality

They Should Forget Romance and Prepare Themselves to Meet the Future; No Strong Man to Lean Upon

Wake up girls. Rub the sleep from your eyes. Face reality. Fit yourselves to look the world in the face and tell it where to get off.

From time immemorial the pipe dream of every woman has been love and marriage, a husband and children, a home and security. Heretofore there has been enough probability of the dream coming true for every girl to believe that she was being vouchsafed a prophetic vision of her future and that it wasn't much use for her to bother about learning any way to support herself when heaven would supply her a meal ticket.

But the war has changed all of that. The pleasant romantic era of sturdy oaks and clinging vines is gone, never to return. The social upheaval of the world has, in particular, changed the whole status of women. It has made a new heaven and a new earth and also a new hell for them, unless they fit themselves to meet the changed conditions.

So, girls, rouse yourselves from your sentimental trances. Forget your wishful thinking. Waste no more time looking for a fairy prince to come riding down your street and trying to decide whether you will have a swell church wedding or marry at home under a floral bell.

Instead, concentrate all your thoughts upon the present and use every bit of intelligence you have in trying to get a preview of the future and preparing yourself to meet it. If you are single accept the bitter truth that you cannot count upon marriage. For you and millions of other girls like you there will be no love life. You will never know the sweet dependence of wifehood, the thrill of having your baby's head upon your breast, for the men who should have been your husbands are lying in graves over half the world they died to save.

ON YOUR OWN

This means in the first place, that you will have no strong man to lean upon. You will be on your own. You will have to earn your own bread and butter or starve. In the second place, it means that you will have to take this new life and like it. You will have to acquire a new philosophy and to substitute acquired tastes and habits for the old instinctive ones of your sex. In other words, you will have to espouse a career instead of a man, absorb yourself in your ambitions instead of your home, and let the knowledge that you are being of use in the world compensate you for having missed your heart's desire.

If you should chance to be a war widow, or one of the wives whose husbands come back to them wrecked in body or mind, you will have even greater need than the single girl to have some trade or profession by which you can support not only yourself but those dependent upon you. For upon your salary may depend whether you can keep your children with you or have them sent to some orphanage, whether you can give your sick husband the medical attention and rest and freedom from worry that will restore him to strength and health again, or leave him a permanent invalid.

In any case, even when your husband comes home from the war unscathed, as please God he may, he will have to begin his business life over again; and a wife who is a good little money-maker will be a mighty handy thing to have about the house.

Therefore, girls, in this time of dreary waiting for you know not what, quit mooning over vine-wreathed cottages and all that went with them, and gird yourselves to meet this new hard life that will need hard, strong women to do men's work instead of embroidering doilies and knitting pink baby socks. Find out what Nature intended you to do and learn how to do it.

DON'T KID SELF

Don't kid yourself into thinking that it isn't worth while trying to learn how to do anything well because your job is going to be only a temporary bridge between the school-room and the altar. The chances are that it is going to be your lifework and how much you get paid for doing it will depend altogether on your skill. You will have to work just as hard for a thin pay envelope as for a fat one.

This war has flung every door of opportunity wide open to women. It has been proved that they can do any kind of work that men can do except the heavier labor. The government, colleges, the industries themselves have established training schools for women in which they can fit themselves to do good work and earn large pay. Take advantage of these opportunities and you will have taken out the best insurance you can against whatever vicissitudes Fate has in store for you.

The banner pair event in tournament bridge is the world's championship Masters pair contest. There was a fine showing made in this event by the bridge experts who have joined the armed services. Pvt. Phil Abramsohn and Tobias Stone finished second. Pvt. Morrie Elis, playing with the donor of the gold trophy for this event, Waldemar von Zedtwitz, finished third. Pvt. Harold Ziman and Pfc. Melvin Lobell were in fourth position. Pvt. George Rapee and Sam Fry, Jr., finished in ninth position.

Eighty of the strongest pairs in bridge entered the long and grueling four-session contest, so finishing any place in the first 10 is really notable.

Pfc. Melvin Lobell is practically a newcomer in tournament bridge. The slam he bid on today's hand was risky, but it turned out all right when the clubs broke 2-2, so that one ruff established the suit, and the king of trumps was picked up.

R.C.A.F. Girls Get Accustomed To London Life

By ALAN RANDAL

LONDON, Oct. 1—(CP)—Girls of the Royal Canadian Air Force (W.D.) just getting accustomed to life in London, think Britons, particularly the women, are making a great job of living under trying wartime conditions.

The food is much better than we expected but a lot of credit is due to the resourcefulness of British housewives," said AW. Peggy Douglas of Winnipeg, a clerk stenographer of the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division) serving at headquarters.

"There is much more variety than we anticipated and people are clever here at concealing shortages. For instance they sweeten puddings with raisins."

Miss Douglas, former secretary in a brokerage house in Winnipeg, is boarding out with AW. Margaret MacKinnon of Moosomin, Sask., so she has had a chance to see just what British housewives can do with the materials at hand.

So far the girls haven't had a chance to become acquainted with English boys but Canadians in the army and air force overseas don't stand on ceremony before making themselves known when they see "Canada" flashes the girls' shoulders.

"They all talk as though they want to go home but you can tell they're just like us. "They don't want to go back really until this business is finished with here," said Miss Douglas.

And Mine Your Baby

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

One of the mother's stock excuses when it is suggested perhaps she needs to make some alteration in the children's meals is: "They seem to be all right, they're not sick."

Nature is wonderfully ingenious. Given a baby almost anything to eat and he'll extract whatever nourishment there is in it. The desire to survive is inherent in all of us. Individuals will take enormous punishment in their endeavor to stay alive.

But health is far from a state of just being alive. Babies have been fed on beer instead of milk; older children have eaten a steady diet of pork butts, cornmeal and molasses. But that does not argue for one moment that either diet is advisable. Such diets do not provide the elements which are needed for good nourishment.

No one needs to be an expert on the subject of vitamins or have more than a speaking acquaintance with proteins, carbohydrates, minerals and fats, to provide proper food for their children. The more we know the better for us. But every mother, no matter what her deficiencies in dietetic knowledge, can familiarize herself with the pattern of meals which will keep her family well-fed.

This type of breakfast is typical. Most families satisfy their early morning appetites with fresh fruit juices, an egg, perhaps a strip of bacon, some cereal with milk and toast and coffee or tea. For the children milk is the drink, or some beverage made with milk.

There is hardly a family but takes use of the left-overs of the last evening's dinner as the backbone of the lunch.

There usually is some meat or fish or else cheese or eggs as the main dish, with left-over vegetables, some cooked fruit, perhaps, and the inevitable milk and bread. Cookies or some sweet stuffs usually are at hand.

For dinner the pattern is a classic: meat, potatoes, bread and butter, some vegetable, a salad of fresh fruits, greens and a simple dessert. Milk again for the children.

CORRECT DIET

Thus, with only this as her basic knowledge the parent is sure to provide meat, eggs, fish or poultry once daily, cereal once daily, vegetables and fruits twice daily, milk three times daily. If she sees to it that there are always whole-grain breads and real butter or vitamin-fortified margarine for those breads, a good diet is automatically managed. And adults as well as children will be well-nourished.

Know Etiquette for All Occasions

Are You Awkward at Good-by?

Saying good-by at a party is a simple thing. But how many women do it badly, leave an impression of awkwardness, poor manners?

It's correct for a departing guest to rise when she says it's time for her to leave—and then she walks directly to the door with her hosts. To stay seated while murmuring "Really I must go," to stand chatting endlessly in the hall is inconsiderate to hosts and other guests.

Should you say good-by to each of the guests? Not if the party is a large one. Nod to those nearby, say, "I've had a lovely time" to your hostess—and you'll leave a delightful impression.

Knowing etiquette keeps you poised, gracious at all times. When introduced to a man you have met before, don't remind him of the previous introduction if he doesn't remember you. If in doubt about what to wear at a party, ask your hostess, "Is it formal?" Using your visiting card to write a message, cross out the "Miss" or "Mrs." before your name.

Our 35-page booklet tells the correct thing to do on all occasions as hostess or guest. Gives etiquette for public places, at teas, dances, when travelling—for the younger and older sets.

Write 15 cents in coins for your copy of "Etiquette—The Correct Thing to Do" to Home Service, The Edmonton Bulletin, 60 Front Street West, Toronto, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of the booklet.

Please allow a week or ten days for delivery.

Taste-Wise Cooks Make Sundays "Salad Days"

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

GREEN SALAD WITH COTTAGE CHEESE
(Serves 4)

One-half head lettuce, ½ bunch celery, ½ head romaine, ½ cucumber; sliced 1 bunch radishes, ½ cup French dressing, ½ pound cottage cheese, salt and pepper, chives or onion juice.

Cut greens into pieces and toss lightly with French dressing. Serve with cottage cheese seasoned with salt, pepper, chopped chives or onion juice.

CITRUS WALDORF SALAD
(Serves 5-6)

Cut in small pieces: 2 oranges, 1 apple, 4 stalks celery. Combine with ¼ cup raisins or walnuts, jelly French dressing or mayonnaise.

ORANGE APPLE SALAD

Alternate orange half slices with wedge-shaped pieces of unpeeled red apple.

PRUNE ORANGE SALAD

PETER RABBIT SALAD

Arrange orange on shredded lettuce. Sprinkle generously with shredded raw carrot. Top with a little coconut.

Sunday's Menu

DINNER: Melon, pot roast, cranberry jelly, potato dumplings, sweet-sour beets, carrot salad, deep dish apple pie, hard sauce, coffee, milk.

CHURCHILL IN PRINT

LONDON.—(CP)— Free Belgian sources in London say the latest of clandestine newspapers being published in Nazi-occupied Belgium is "The Churchill Gazette."

Debunker

The copper coin often called a "penny" in America is not a penny at all. An act of Congress in 1786 defined this coin as a "cent" and states: "The highest copper piece of which 100 shall equal a dollar shall be called a cent. At a later date an act outlawed the circulation of the English penny in America, and since that time many people have erroneously called the cent a penny. The English penny is equal to about 2 cents.

KILT OR TROUSERS—TAKE YOUR CHOICE!

Auxiliary Notes

Final two tag days for Christmas parcels for men overseas will take place Oct. 10 and 17. Three auxiliaries will share equally the profits of the tag day that takes place a week from this Saturday. They are: the W.A. to the 4th Casualty Clearing Station, W.A. to R.C.C.S., and 2nd L.A. to the 9th Army Troop R.C.E. Mrs. G. E. Goodall is in charge of all arrangements and asks that members of all auxiliaries volunteer to do some tagging in order to help swell the funds collected for Christmas parcels for the men of these three units. Following two recent tag days and the current Community Chest Drive, the auxiliaries will need a great deal of help in order to make a success of the tag. Volunteers are asked to phone Mrs. Goodall as soon as possible at 71822.

Postal Authorities Ask Canadian Choose Overseas Gifts Carefully

By JAMES McCOOK

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—(CP)—When Canadian postal officials have nightmares they don't fall over cliffs or race two steps ahead of a flame-spouting dragon. What they may see is a mass of parcels for soldiers overseas and the stopper slowly coming out of a huge vat of maple syrup.

Having asked that Christmas mail for the men overseas be mailed before the deadline date of Nov. 10, and if possible during October, officials urge that the mail be properly addressed to facilitate movement.

Then they plead for wise selection of the gifts to be sent and equally wise selection of containers in which they are placed.

Maple syrup has caused endless woe. The folks at home want to send it and the men overseas want to get it. But bottles break and caps come loose, and not only one parcel but bags of parcels can be ruined. The man receiving the gift will get a few bits of broken glass instead of syrup — and everything else in the parcel is either damaged or destroyed. "Not much of a gift to open on Christmas morning," one official commented.

Glass bottles of any kind are unpopular with the post office. It is not possible for all mail to be handled with kid gloves. Ships have to be loaded in a hurry sometimes, and, with tons of mail, individual care for any parcel is not possible.

"We have had sorrowful experiences with bottles and jars containing jam, pickles and other kinds of food" an official said. "We have had trouble with tins containing liquids or solid foods where the caps have simply been pressed on and have come adrift while being transported. And grapes, bananas and other perishable fresh fruits usually cause trouble."

CAKE A FAVORITE

Apart from these problem children of the post office world, an abundance of toothsome morsels can be sent for Christmas—or any other day—and arrive safely.

Officials point out that Christmas presents of the men overseas are cake as often as anything else. A cake placed in a tin or other strong container, is practically sure to arrive in good condition.

"About the best way of doing it is to make sure that the package is securely sewn in cloth, with the address label firmly attached," a post office expert said. "We also suggest that those sending parcels insert a slip inside the packages giving the name of the sender and the person for whom it is meant. This guards against damage to the outer label. If we have the inner slip as well, the parcel can still go on to its proper destination."

Among other pet hates of the department are matches and lighter fluids. "These things not only threaten the safety of the mail, but they threaten the entire ship and its cargo," the official said. "This has been stated many times, but they still turn up in parcels occasionally."

WATCH FOR HEAT

Canadian postal authorities have been advised from England that parcels to Canadians in the Middle East and in Ceylon should not contain foodstuffs and confectionary likely to be affected by severe heat. Chocolate candies are likely to suffer damage, for instance.

Light cardboard boxes not packed carefully give trouble. When placed with other parcels they are likely to be crushed and the string is loosened and falls off. Next the covering paper goes, taking the address with it—and the post office has a new problem on its hands and a soldier goes without the parcel he expected.

Officials have this bit of kindly counsel for those who are full of good intentions and sometimes fail to follow through:

"Don't write a man overseas saying you are sending him a parcel until it is actually mailed. Disappointment is caused to a man who receives a letter saying a parcel is on the way and who waits patiently and then fails to receive it.

"He suspects it has been stolen or has been lost, and has a feeling of frustration. But practically always he will receive the promised parcel if you tell him it is coming only after it has been mailed. If he gets the letter promising it after it has been received, then no harm is done."

Kiwanians Devote Much Time to Task Selling Apples for Kids Home

How big is the job of selling enough apples to maintain a home for underprivileged children for the next year? That question can be answered by any one of Edmonton's 120 Kiwanians who have been in the midst of that job for the last month.

First of all, one must realize that all the work is being done by men who have their regular hours of work to do six days a week.

Here are some of the jobs some of them are tackling — in their "spare time."

Circularized the 120 members, asking them to submit the time of day Saturday they will be available, the location they would prefer working in, the job they would prefer to do, etc., and then compiling the replies, and allotting the individual assignments for Saturday—and notifying the 120 members of their assignments.

Met in committee meetings every Monday for the last month and the Kiwanis Glee club remained after the meeting to practice for the Strand theatre program scheduled for Friday night.

Sold approximately 3000 boxes of apples to Edmonton citizens and delivered them to the houses.

Arranged for the distribution of apples and equipment to Edmonton's street corners on Saturday.

When scurrying about preparing their costumes, planning their make-up, repairing and decorating their baskets and cash boxes, and attended to numerous other minute details connected with the tag day.

And lo and behold—in the midst of all this "spare time" activity the members turned out in large numbers Wednesday afternoon to tidy up the huge garden at the back of the Kiwanis home.

4 Carloads Apples Sold by Kiwanis

More than four carloads of apples will have been sold by the Edmonton Kiwanians by the time they will have completed their fall campaign next Saturday.

Nearly 2,500 boxes of the fruit were sold to Edmontonians in the first three weeks of the box sale campaign that commenced Aug. 31. This week's results will likely boost the total sale well over 3,000 boxes, the objective set by the 120 Kiwanians at their opening meeting one month ago.

The campaign will close with a tag day Saturday when the 120 Kiwanians, their wives, daughters and volunteer friends will sell the apples individually at street corners.

Underprivileged Kids Find Welcome Refuge Among Many Comforts

Provincial government wards, neglected children, and children of widows unable to maintain a home of their own, are cared for at the Kiwanis Children's Home on 120 street, and every dollar that is earned on Apple Day and in Apple Week is used for its operation and maintenance.

Today, 51 children between four and 14 years old are being cared for, and during 1941, approximately 250 children passed through the home.

Aside from its "permanent" residents, the home acts as a clearing house for deaf, dumb and blind children who are assembled from all parts of northern Alberta on their way to government schools in eastern Canada. This service is given twice a year when the children are guests of the Kiwanis club. Recently the home has opened its doors to Old Country guest children.

Miss Hazel O. Mann, who has been superintendent for the last three years, is in charge of a staff of six, a housekeeper, cook, laundress, and four dormitory maids.

Visitors are impressed by the well-planned supervision. Children are expected to take part in small duties, they receive their formal education at Oliver school, attend Sunday school at Robertson United church, and are given opportunities for varied forms of recreation.

The grounds north of the home have been converted into a large vegetable garden, where members of the Kiwanis club give their time to help make the home self-sufficient. The older children assist in weed-pulling and potato-digging.

A PLAYGROUND

South of the home is the playground where one sees facilities for volleyball and basketball, sand boxes, swings and slides. Indoor playrooms also are provided, one equipped with toys for the younger children, and one for use by the older children on rainy days, or in bad weather.

There is a library, containing between 500 and 600 books for the youngsters, and this also is used as a study room. Supervision is given to homework, and the children are encouraged to strive for high marks.

Both boys and girls are responsible for making their own beds, and cleaning their respective dormitories. A piano is provided in the sunroom, and any child may study music while living at the home.

TOYS ARE GIVEN

Many toys are given to the home, and on each little girl's bed is a favorite doll. Each child is given an individual locker and chest in which to keep personal belongings.

Discipline is maintained in the dining room by a monitor who is present at all meals. On each table, including those built for four-year-olds, a British flag is placed in the centre. If a child is naughty, the flag is removed. Special treats are given to those sitting at tables where the flags are kept up all week.

Records also are kept of a child's personal appearance and conduct. He is awarded gold, silver or blue stars according to his weekly ratings on these points, and twice a year, prizes are given to those having the most stars. All discipline is handled on the honor system.

MANY DUTIES

Miss Mann, in addition to her supervisor's duties, is in charge of menu-planning and buying, and as a graduate nurse, looks after children who are ill.

"We have been very fortunate in that the children's health has been excellent this year," she announced. "Except for a few cases of scarlet fever, we have had almost no sickness."

Miss Mann explained that in addition to their other activities the children are interested in beadwork and scrapbooks. The girls like to sew and knit, while the boys are enthusiastic about model-airplane building, she said.

Four organized groups are functioning at the home. The girls belong to the Explorers and the C.G.I.T., while boys are members of the Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts.

FLAG CEREMONIES

Scouts have the responsibility of raising the flag, while Cubs lower it every night.

Twice a month, the Kiwanis Women's Auxiliary comes to the home to sew, and once a month, women of the Wesley United and the Garneau churches assist.

When possible, parents are asked to contribute a small amount toward a child's clothing, but the club provides most of the clothing, as it does board, room and hospitalization. The expenses of operating the home have increased until at the present, they are at least 25 per cent higher than in 1941.

The Kiwanis Children's Home was built in 1922, and is administered by a board of directors elected by the Kiwanis club of Edmonton.

Trustees of the home are Mayor John W. Fry, J. A. Christianson, president of the Kiwanis club, W. A. Bayley, president of the Kiwanis children's aid society, and W. M. Fawcett, secretary-treasurer.

Kiwanis Apples Aid Underprivileged Kids

Edmonton Kiawanis Club Boasts Many Activities During Last 23 Years

During the 23 years of its existence, the Edmonton Kiwanis club has had a profitable and varied assortment of activities, with the primary object of most of them being the welfare of underprivileged children.

Shortly after the club was organized on July 15, 1919, the members decided to set as their primary objective the support of the Children's Aid society.

They immediately launched upon a farsighted and ambitious campaign of raising $50,000 to erect a home for under-privileged children.

The home was completed within three years and has been maintained and improved ever since.

The organization has grown from a membership of 55 in the first year to a membership of 120 in 1942. What the club may lack in numbers it more than makes up in aggressiveness, co-operation and fulfilment of objectives.

Through the years the club has not only attended to matters concerning the Kiwanis home but has on numerous occasions raised funds and given other material, physical and moral help to other welfare, war and charitable activities in the city.

HERE'S A SAMPLE

A good example of this type of activity is their raising of $10,000 for the Junior Red Cross society towards the erection of the home for convalescents.

Various means of raisings funds have been used by the club. Play productions, tag days, rummage sales, contributions, canvassing, and more recently, the Apple Day and Kiwanis Glee club, have all contributed to the cause.

The members have taken an active interest in all types of war finance, activities including the Victory loan campaigns, Spitfire fund, bond sale broadcasts, as well as the Community Chest, and the Y.M.C.A. campaigns.

At present, the annual rummage sale, the Apple Week, and the Kiwanis Glee club constitute the chief source of the club's annual income.

Kiwanis Apple Week was introduced in 1930, and has increased its scope from year to year, to be recognized now as an institution.

The glee club was organized three years ago, mainly to provide entertainment for troops in training quarters in Alberta cities.

Medleys used by the singers have all been arranged by W. G. Strachan, Kiwanis past president. Ed. McGarvey, past president and governor elect of the Western district, is leader of the group.

Regular attendance of the club members to meetings and other club activities always has been a source of pride of this organization. Two members, very active today, boast the Canadian record of having attended every Kiwanis meeting in the past 23 years. These men are Roy Henry, club historian, and Thornton Graham.

Several Edmonton Kiwanians have held high offices in the Kiwanis world of America.

The late Dr. C. C. Tatham and Andrew A. White were vice-presidents of Kiwanis International, and the same two men with Ed McGarvey and Dr. F. S. McCall, filled the positions of lieutenant governors of the Alberta district.

William Fawcett has been secretary of the club since 1929.

Kiwanis Glee Club Will Sing Friday

The Kiwanis Glee Club will broadcast over both stations, CFRN and CJCA, from the stage of the Strand theatre Friday evening. Ed McGarvey, governor-elect for 1943 of the Western Canada district of Kiwanis, will conduct the choir which will sing several numbers. Miss Kathleen Busby, well-known soprano singer, will also participate in the program.

James A. Christiansen, president of the Edmonton Kiwanis club, will speak briefly on Apple Day.

The program will be broadcast over station CFRN from 8.45 to 9.15 and over CJCA from 9:30 to 10.

Women's Auxiliary Assists Kiwanians

The women's auxiliary of the Edmonton Kiwanis club is making preparations for serving lunch to the workers who will attend to street sales of Kiwanis Apples next Saturday.

Annual Drive Proves Outstanding Feature Autumnal Activities

Over a period of years, Kiwanis Apples have been part and parcel of Edmonton's fall campaigning activities. The term "Kiwanis Apples" has become a term synonymous with the Kiwanis Home. Proceeds from the sale of apples has been the chief source of income for the support of the Kiwanis Home on 119 street, north of Jasper avenue.

To hundreds of under-privileged children the big red apples and the 120 city businessmen who roll up their sleeves in their off hours and carry out activities designed to raise money for support of the home, are the two groups of "sugar daddies" that have proven indispensible.

Their big annual drive is the fall sale of apples. This fall, 120 members of the Edmonton Kiwanis club, working in teams of 10, have been staging an apple-selling competition since Aug. 31.

THE OBJECTIVE

At a meeting on that date the members set their objective at 3000 boxes of apples to be sold during September. Last Monday with one week to go, the team captains reported a total sale of nearly 2,500 boxes.

Charles F. Peavoy was chosen general chairman of this campaign for the fifth year in succession. Nine committee chairmen are working under Mr. Peavoy. They are: H. W. J. Maddison, chairman of the box sale committee which consists of 12 team captains with nine workers on each team; S. G. Easton, chairman of the street sale committee which is completing arrangements for the street tag day sale on Saturday.

Advertising committee, Alex Entwistle; purchasing T. H. Campbell; finance H. O. Patriquin; deliveries, T. H. Campbell; location, Cecil Martin; costuming, William Connelly; and broadcasting, Ed. McGarvey.

ACTIVE COMMITTEES

Each committee has been active for the last month, and all workers are concentrating upon the closing event Saturday, when the sales cease at the conclusion of the day's sale of apples at street corners.

During the last month the Kiwanians have been selling boxes of apples to citizens at $3 per box. Next Saturday the Kiwanians, their wives, daughters and some volunteers, will be selling individual apples at street corners.

Preparations for the street sale are nearing completion. The foyer of the Empire theatre is the Kiwanis Apple Day headquarters.

ALL ARE READY

Committee chairmen, team captains, sales people, and all others actively engaged, will gather at the headquarters Friday evening to polish the apples, prepare the baskets and cash boxes, plan their costuming and make-up, receive last minute instructions and generally have everything ready for the go-signal Saturday morning.

Business men generally regarded as the prim and sedately-garbed type of gentlemen behind their office counters, will be seen at street corners, costumed in all types of dress, representing tramps to clowns to kings.

All proceeds from the month's box sales as well as from the tag day sales will be used in the maintenance of the Kiwanis home for boys.

Civil Servants Make Donations To Chest Funds

Meeting in the office of Provincial Treasurer Solon E. Low Thursday, the War Services Committee of Edmonton Branch No. 2, Civil Service Association, voted donations of $1,000 to the Edmonton Community Chest, $200 to the Calgary Chest and $50 to the Lethbridge Chest.

Donations were based on the amount of contributions to the war services fund by civil servants in the three cities.

Deduction of one-half of one per cent from civil servants' salaries for the war services fund has been approved by the association's provincial executive and also by the War Services Committee. This percentage contribution was adopted to increase contributions to the fund.

MAY BE CANCELLED

At a meeting two weeks ago the provincial executive recommended that the annual convention of the association, usually held in December, be cancelled this year to save travel expenses and other costs.

It was left with the association's branches to decide whether the convention should be cancelled, and Branch No. 2 in Edmonton will meet Oct. 13 at the government cafe in the Legislative Buildings to obtain the opinion of its members on the recommendation.

Getting Around

Canada should publicize her role in the war to her great ally to the south, a great opportunity to do so was muffed in the case of the Aleutians action.

At the same time there is more dissatisfaction expressed by the handling of news in general of activities in Alaska and the Aleutian Islands.

A correspondent with the U.S. forces in that area has at last been permitted to write some articles and this writer also confirms the view that the tight censorship clamped down on events in the northwestern Pacific has been the chief reason for the heavy crop of wild rumors that circulated in the U.S. and Canada during the past few months.

Edmonton heard its full share of these rumors in the summer. Some of them were repeated so often that they were accepted by many persons as being the truth.

No sensible person questions the necessity for censorship in time of war and at times the safety of the state as a whole demands that censorship be total and rigidly enforced. But censorship must not mean total silence concerning operations.

For instance, there were periods as long as 14 days after the attack on Dutch Harbor with not a solitary communique about operations in that area.

* * *

Wild rumors about attacks and landings on the mainland of Alaska circulated in these parts and were given greater credence as the result of the continued official silence.

Surely a daily communique, stating there had been no further enemy attacks would have satisfied the people and at the same time conveyed no information of the slightest possible value to the enemy.

Credit Unions to Meet at Red Deer

First annual convention of the Alberta Credit Union League will be held at Red Deer Oct. 5 to complete organization of the League, it was announced Friday by F. J. Fitzpatrick, president. Representatives of the 67 Credit Unions in the province are expected to attend the meeting.

OUT TO WIN

F.D.R., on Tour of Nation, Reports War Spirit High, Production Close to Peak

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, completing yesterday a secret inspection tour of war activities from border to border and coast to coast, expressed the firm conviction that production in the United States is going extremely well and that Washington is lagging far behind the rest of the country in war spirit.

At a special press conference, he said he had found war plants operating at 94 to 95 per cent of efficiency, with both labor and management travelling with all possible speed toward the goal of max mum output.

In declaring that war spirit is not as high in Washington as elsewhere he cited three reasons:

1—Many members of congress, seeking to justify their service to the war effort, are delving into questions which should be left to military experts.

2—A minority of the press and radio, which appears not to be really familiar with the country, was thinking in local terms. While most stories are all right, he said, some do harm because they are not based on facts, and the greatest offenders are some commentators and columnists. The president declined to give specific examples.

CERTAIN OFFICIALS

3—Certain administration officials, who might well button up their lips. Some of these men, who do not have access to full information or possibly are publicity seekers, make picturesque speeches, he said. Sometimes they act under the impression that insufficient emphasis is being given to their particular fields.

Discussing his trip, which had been kept secret until the White House lifted the censorship veil yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt remarked that there had been no suppression of news. The three representatives of major news services—AP, UP and INS—who accompanied him were given complete freedom, he said.

The president had travelled 8,781 miles in two weeks, through half the states and a sliver of Mexico. Dodging big cities wherever possible, he dropped in on 11 private war plants and on eight army, seven navy and two marine stations.

He saw soldiers, sailors and marines being toughened for battle, wounded ships and wounded men from battles already fought, and death-dealing war machines for land, air and sea forces rolling off assembly lines in growing volume. He observed how management and labor are trying to win the battle of production.

PLEASED WITH TRIP

And he was so pleased with the trip around the rim of the country that he expressed a hope he would be able to make one or two similar trips next year through the centre of the country and into the southeast. Among the things that impressed the President most deeply was the increased and increasing employment of women in all kinds of plants, including navy yards.

To get those ideas, Mr. Roosevelt left Washington Sept. 17, touching Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, New Brighton, Minn., Athol, Idaho, and then Tacoma and Seattle, five days later. He moved down the coast by way of Vancouver, Wash., Portland, Oakland, Long Beach and San Diego, turning eastward on Sept. 27, he stopped at San Antonio, Fort Worth, New Orleans, Hattiesburg, Miss., and Columbia, S.C.

Never had any American President undertaken such a wartime journey—a journey which took him, in the Far West, into an actual theatre of war operations. Always along the war-conscious dimpsed out coast there was that thousand-to-one chance that a Jap might drop a bomb or fire a shell. But with the ever-alert secret service in charge of the trip, not a single alarming incident developed anywhere.

Extreme precautions were taken. Nowhere along the entire coast, for instance, was the president more than 300 yards from an armed soldier.

From conversations and personal observances during his travels, Mr. Roosevelt said he got an idea that the morale of war workers is amazingly high, that the people are jittery about the rise in living costs in recent months, but that they are willing, 94 or 95 per cent of them, to make any sacrifices or put up with meat and mileage rationing or any other necessary emergency measures.

In brief, here is where he went and what he saw in a military way.

Detroit, Sept. 18, Chrysler tank arsenal and Ford Willow Run bomb plant.

New Brighton, Minn., Sept. 19, plant of Federal Cartridge Company.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 23, yard of Oregon Shipbuilding Corporation where a 10,500-ton Liberty freighter was launched 10 days after the keel was laid.

VIEWS NAVAL BASE

San Antonio, Sept. 27, Kelly, Duncan and Randolph Fields, San Antonio aviation cadet centre, Fort Sam Houston.

New Orleans, Sept. 29, Higgins Industries, Inc., ship yard.

Hattiesburg, Miss., Sept. 29, Camp Shelby.

Columbia, S.C., Sept. 30, Fort Jackson.

NO FORMAL SPEECHES

There were no formal speeches along the route. Twice Mr. Roosevelt talked briefly and informally. At the Bremerton Navy Yard on Puget Sound he told thousands of workers that his trip across the country had made him "more and more convinced that the people of the whole nation are in this war to win it, and win it just as fast as we can."

Eastern Railways Carry Peak Loads

Railways in the east, as in the west, are working with peak loads and with a shortage of men due to military call-ups and other factors.

C. T. Vance, chairman of lodge 861 of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen reported after a trip to Toronto and Montreal, where he conferred with other officials of the union.

He is among those nominated for one of the three Canadian positions in a committee of 15 to meet in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1943. The meeting will take the place of a general convention of the international organization.

Uniform Health Laws Are Urged For All Canada

CALGARY, Oct. 2.—(CP)—The public health structure of Canada should be unified and made a direct responsibility of the federal government, Dr. W. H. Hill, medical officer of health, Calgary, said last night at the annual banquet of the Alberta Public Health Association.

Direct federal government responsibility for the maintenance of public health would result in a more wholesome respect of health laws, he said.

The public health organization, Dr. Hill emphasized, was intimately concerned with every phase of living. It was interesting to observe how relatively few communities had instituted measures designed for public safety.

ONLY SAFE MILK

Pasteurized milk was the only safe milk and yet Ontario was the only province to make pasteurization compulsory. All the rest of the communities in Canada, both rural and urban, adopted a "take your choice" kind of attitude, and this in spite of the sure knowledge and proof of dangers involved in drinking raw milk. This, said Dr. Hill, was one argument in favor of uniform health laws throughout Canada under control of the federal government.

USE OF BIBLE IN COURT IS SAID HEALTH THREAT

CALGARY, Oct. 2.—(CP)—The Bible had become a possible medium for the spread of disease because of the common courtroom practice of kissing the bible when oaths were administered, J. Butterfield, provincial sanitary engineer, said yesterday in his presidential address to the Alberta Public Health Association, which is holding a two-day convention here.

The practice was as dangerous as the use of a common drinking cup, Mr. Butterfield said, deriving a list of infections that could be contracted in this manner. A person could be placed under oath after making a rise to raise the right hand and to repeat the words prescribed by law, he said. However, the majority of the public could not comply with this fact and magistrates and judges usually overlooked it.

85 ATTENDING

Officers of medical health, public health nurses, sanitary inspectors and other public health officials are attending the convention. A total of 85 were registered by Saturday.

Dr. H. Siemens, Lamont public health district, was elected president of the association for the ensuing year; Dr. G. M. Little, Edmonton medical officer of health, vice-president, and Miss H. M. Arthur, provincial department of public health, secretary.

Members of the executive committee are Dr. Frank Conroy, assistant health officer, Calgary; Mr. Butterfield and Mrs. Laura Woodhouse, Edmonton district.

NEED FOR PLANNING

The need for present and future planning to integrate the services of only small health units to public health units with the health services of the armed forces and those offered by the provincial department of health was emphasized by Dr. M. R. Bow, deputy minister of public health for Alberta.

U.S. Authorities Get City Building

The United States government has leased the building formerly occupied by Dominion Rubber Co. on 102 street, south of Jasper avenue, it has been learned.

Plans call for extensive alterations to the building, including the installation of a refrigeration plant, and providing of living quarters for men passing through here.

The building contains 30,000 square feet of floor space in its single floor and basement. It has been occupied by the Scott Fruit Company, Ltd. This staff is being moved to the firm's building on 103 street, which was damaged by fire.

Earlier this week it was reported that the U.S. army engineers had arranged to take over the Edmonton Motors, Ltd., building at 102 avenue and 100 street. The motor firm will continue business in other premises.

War Industries To Absorb Over Million Workers

By JACK WILLIAMS

OTTAWA, Oct. 2.—(CP)—New and drastic reductions in civilian industry, of which leading government officials have given repeated warning in the past few days, are expected to strike hard at Canadian industry which has not already been converted to war production.

Just how many peacetime industrial workers have been changed to war workers is a point on which informed officials refuse to speculate, but it is known that most of the skilled mechanics among the 875,000 or so direct war workers were employed in factories serving civilian needs.

MAKING WAR GOODS

Many of these men are still at the same bench they worked at in 1939 but the product of their labor has altered. They are now making war goods.

This conversion has already made a sharp imprint on civilian production, with many commodities fast disappearing from the market and tight restrictions being applied to others. Now it is apparent that even greater curtailment is to be expected in the immediate future.

There have been these pertinest sentences in public addresses within the past two days:

Police Searching For Lloyd Pierce

R.C.M.P. of the Edmonton and Athabasca detachments are seeking Lloyd Pierce, a 'teen-aged youth, who has not been heard from since he left Edmonton for his home at Colinton Wednesday.

He had been staying with relatives at 12756 116 street, and left Wednesday for his home. He has not arrived there and no trace of him has been found.

He is five feet seven or eight inches tall, and weighs about 105 pounds. He is very thin, has black hair and dark brown eyes.

When he left Edmonton he was wearing a grey suit, blue trousers and windbreaker and black oxfords.

He was carrying his national registration card, but was not well and has an impediment in his speech.

Lieut.-Col. Merritt Termed 'Most Outstanding Personality of Dieppe Raid' Never an Officer More Highly Thought of By Men Than V.C. Winner

Lieut.-Col. Merritt photographed on manoeuvres "Somewhere in England" last July when he and his unit were training intensively for the assault upon Dieppe. It was at Dieppe that he won the Victoria Cross.

LT.-COL. C. C. I. MERRITT, V.C.

This smiling soldier today holds the highest tribute of a grateful Empire yet accorded a Canadian in this war, for the masterly service he performed at Dieppe while leading his unit, the South Saskatchewan Regiment.

He never asked a man to go where he could not, himself, lead. Thus did Lt.-Col. Merritt's battalion report to headquarters upon his resourcefulness at Dieppe. Here he is with a fellow officer pausing for a chat along a peaceful English lane.

Three members of the Merritt family now overseas. Canada's new V.C. winner, Lt.-Col. C. C. I. Merritt, his sister, Mrs. Jack MacMillan, with the Canadian Mechanized Transport, and his brother, Lt. Bill Merritt, with the Seaforth Highlanders of Canada.

"... He Did Not Falter Or Change"

Dear Mrs. Merritt

It is with the deepest regret that I am writing to you with regard to Cecil whom I have great hope is a prisoner as when he was last seen he was alive although wounded, probably twice.

He fought a most gallant action and refused to come off in the ships until all his men were evacuated.

I shall now quote from a report submitted to me by his battalion -

"Col Merritt, CO, SSR, has been agreed upon by all members of the bn as the most outstanding personality of the raid. His bravery, resourcefulness, and conduct at all times were of the highest order and he never at any time asked a man to go where he could not himself lead. He seemed to be everywhere in the bn area at once and was always there when someone was held up to help them through. He helped to carry wounded and made sure of the safety and well being of all ranks except himself. He absolutely ignored enemy fire, even that of snipers who were actually after him, in the carrying out of his job and even after he was wounded himself he did not falter or change."

Words cannot tell you how much we all thought of Cecil and he will be a terrible loss to the Division.

I have spoken to all of his men who are in hospital and they were absolutely unanimous in their high praise of Cecil as a Commander both before and during this action. I have never known an officer who was thought more highly of by his men.

I am recommending him for a suitable award for his great courage and leadership.

I am also writing to Cecil's wife. Please excuse the typewritten letter but my writing is so bad.

With deepest sympathy
Yours very sincerely
J. H. Roberts

Writing to the wife of the V. C. winner, Major-General J. H. Roberts, D.S.O., Commander of the Operation, indicated he planned to recommend Merritt for "a suitable award." Above is a photostatic copy of his letter.

Lieut.-Col. Merritt's family were overjoyed to hear of his award. Left to right: His youngest son, Peter, aged two years, nine months; his wife, the former Grace Bone, of Belleville; his mother, Mrs. Cecil Mack Merritt, of Vancouver, B.C.; and eldest son, Cecil, aged three years, nine months.

The V. C. winner's devotion to duty on the shores of Dieppe was inherent. His father, Captain Cecil Merritt, also of the famed Seaforth Highlanders of Canada, was killed in action during the Battle of Ypres in 1915.

When serving in the Seaforth Highlanders of Canada, Col. Merritt, shown at extreme left, was with the Guard of Honor that attended Lord Bessborough, former Governor-General of Canada, during his visit to Vancouver, B.C. Captain of a Vancouver football championship team he was a graduate of Royal Military College, Kingston.

"Of Brightness Gone"

By Holly Watterson

THE STORY: Peter Frazier and Martin Corby, late-year medical students, are trying for appointments at fashionable Good Samaritan Hospital. Martin is engaged to Peter's step-cousin, Candace Bech, a student nurse, whom Peter also loves. The two students attend a reception for prospective interns given by the hospital board chairman and his wife. There they meet Faith Hartshorne, their hosts' daughter. Martin, selfishly ambitious, sees in the girl a chance for advancement and social prestige.

CHAPTER XII

GOING home in the train Martin chuckled. "You missed something, Pete. Boy, is that Hartshorne kid serious! She writes poetry, all about love and death and eternity. It seems she developed Potts disease when she was 5 or so and had to spend several years on a frame. She's all right now, but I suppose she had to be alone so much that that's the reason for all these deep thoughts and stuff. Anyway, the sun rises and sets in her as far as Papa and Mama are concerned, and she can have anything she wants—except, maybe, enough solitude to suit her. Mama makes her go out and do things; she would prefer her to be a social butterfly, I gather."

Peter was thinking of his brief talk with Dr. Patterson. Dr. Patterson was also professor of surgery at the medical college; Peter had been several times in his classes and had a slight chatting acquaintance with him. He had seen Peter standing alone at the window and had nodded for him to come over. "You're looking pretty grim, lad. Not liking this too much?"

Peter flushed. "Not much, sir," he admitted.

"Why?" Dr. Patterson asked. His eyes were twinkling. "Do you begrudge the ladies their small social pleasures?"

"I don't see what this sort of thing has to do with getting an appointment, sir. I don't see where it has any place in the practice of medicine."

"Don't you?" Dr. Patterson said. "But you'll admit, won't you, that the relationship of any one of these ladies to her physician is much more intimate than to that of any mere—we trust!—she meets excepting her husband? The laying on of hands and all that, you know. What about when they need a physician? Haven't these ladies who are so particular about other things, the right to be particular about that too?"

Peter knew he was being ribbed. He felt that he had been acting very young, and rather bumptious. He flushed uncomfortably.

Dr. Patterson said more gravely, patting his shoulder, "It doesn't really matter, Frazier. We humor the ladies. And for so doing we enjoy better equipment than many hospitals, we have more money to work with and therefore we are enabled to do more and better work—"

That they did do excellent work Peter knew. He thought, chastened, if my appointment is okayed I'll jump at it and be thankful for the chance . . .

It was about a week later that Faith Hartshorne phoned Martin.

He was alone at the time, doing some heavy studying because he hadn't been giving his work all the attention he should have and there was an exam due to come up soon. Mrs. Prosser shouted to him from the foot of the stairs and he ran down wide-legged, each stride, to grab up the receiver dangling from the coin-box telephone.

"This is Faith Hartshorne," she said. Her voice sounded thin and girlish over the phone, and a little uncertain. She was in town with her father and mother to attend a broadcast, the first in a new series her father's company was sponsoring. It was business for her father, and for her mother, too, really; and she wondered if he wouldn't like to meet them all for dinner and come along later to take the curse off it for her? "I want to thank you about Gossip, anyway."

Martin said, "I don't see how I can," too surprised even to sound regretful.

She said, "I was afraid you wouldn't be able to make it, such short notice and all—"

Her voice sounded stiff, and maybe a little hurt, and he was immediately sorry — and alarmed. The Hartshornes asking him — him, a nobody medical student!—to dinner and things, and he had the crust to refuse!

He said quickly, "I was thinking of a bit of cramming I have to do. I can let that go, though, and do it tomorrow night."

Sure he could. He had a date with Candace, but she'd understand about the studying. After all, this was business for him too.

They had dinner at a hotel whose stately portals Martin had passed only on the outside heretofore, and afterward at the broadcast they sat in the sponsor's box, among the mighty. There were moments when Martin could feel himself expanding with sheer physical pleasure, yet he had never passed a more uncomfortable evening in his life.

He was not sure that he was really wanted, in the first place. Mrs. Hartshorne said playfully of her daughter, apropos practically nothing at all. "Faith is a willful little girl, a very willful little girl," in a way that seemed to mean that perhaps Faith had overridden her parents' objections to having him there at all. And Old Man Hartshorne seemed to have him under a microscope, studying him.

The pointed questions about this family, put in a tone of easy geniality, "What part of the country do you come from, Son? What's your dad in?" angered Martin.

That side of his life, with its power to haunt and corrode, Martin kept carefully guarded. He thought furious, I'd like to give him both barrels. I'd like to let him have it, I'd like to admit that my Old Man's no good, that he's poor white trash, too no-account to do anything but sit on his hunkers and talk big and envy guys on relief while my mother works like a man and two horses to keep the farm going and a roof over the kids' heads and so I can have a chance to be something.

But he couldn't afford that, he couldn't afford the luxury of being frank. With a careful choice of the right word and a playful turn of phrase his father emerged under his word painting as perhaps a Micawber but a cheerfully valiant one, the farm as an effort at a miniature Utopia where things sometimes went wrong, but always in a side-splittingly funny way.

Though he didn't know it, he had been at his best. The sharp changes in mood reflected in his expressive face combined with his really good voice to give his story some of the quality of a play: his underlying feeling of contempt lent to the performance an engaging air of devilmay-care.

A warm smile coming on the heels of it was the final undoing of Faith Hartshorne; it reduced her to a sudden gasping tenderness. Her eyes fell in momentary confusion, then lifted again to his—and he was astounded by the unmistakable look of worship he saw in them.

Mr. Hartshorne, too, was completely won. Chuckling still over the last of the droll episodes Martin had related, he said, "That's what I like, a man not ashamed of humble beginnings. Take me, for instance—"

But his wife was not as proud of humble beginnings as he himself was; she managed to side-track him effectively. She had had quite enough of them and for that reason she would have preferred that this boy's people might be a bit more substantial, less "droll" and "amusing." Though it did not really matter, she thought resignedly, if only Faith got what she wanted. If only Faith were happy.

Martin had to phone Candace the next day and cancel their engagement for that evening. They had planned to see a particular movie and he knew that she had been looking forward to it and must be bitterly disappointed; but she said cheerfully, "There's always next time. Of course study must come first."

He didn't mention anything about the Hartshornes. For he had decided that after all you can't tell a girl, no matter how regular she is, that you're breaking a date with her because, instead of studying the night before, you were out with another girl.

What To Do

Fix up your college room with bits of "brightness" you have brought from home! The first sight of the college room is pretty disappointing to the average freshman, but each and every room has great possibilities.

Bedspreads and draperies to match may be obtained in a variety of styles and textures, although something fairly sturdy is almost a "must". Slip cover the easy chair in a solid color that is in the drapery material.

Cover the upper half of one wall (maybe over your desk) with a large sheet of cork, and use it as a Bulletin Board. Thumb tack colored pictures, snap shots, party favors and notices, and thus you can constantly change your decorative theme as your activities change.

Miners Take "Rest"

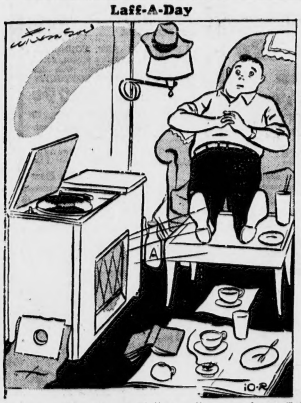

PRINCETON, B.C., Oct. 2—(CP)—Production at Princeton's coal mines came to a halt yesterday when 150 miners, members of the United Mine Workers of America, decided to take what they termed a "rest" in protest against alleged delay in securing action from an arbitration board which has reviewed their demands for pay increases.

Declaration of Voting Result Issued Friday

Official declaration of the results of the Sept. 22 provincial by-election in which Elmer E. Roper, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation candidate, was elected to the vacant seat in the Alberta legislature, was made by Returning Officer H. H. Crawford at 10 a.m. Friday.

The Alberta Election Act requires that the declaration shall be made 10 days after the election.

In his official statement, Returning Officer Crawford declared, Mr. Roper election with a vote total of 8,433, John F. Lymburn, K.C., Independent Party candidate, being the runner-up with 7,188 votes.

FOUR ELIMINATED

Candidates eliminated during the four counts under the proportional representation vote system used in the by-election were Mr. Lymburn; John B. Gillies, Social Credit party; William "Paddy" Griffin, soldiers' candidate; and Maj. Nelles V. Buchanan, M.C., Liberal party.

Maj. Buchanan and Mr. Griffin both lost their $100 deposits in the by-election, both having failed to obtain one-fifth of the total first-choice votes.

Board Official Dies at Calgary

A. Fraser Little, former manager of the Hudson's Bay Company store here, and an official of the Wartime Prices and Trades Board, died this morning in Calgary.

After leaving his position as manager of the Hudson's Bay Company store here, he became director of licensing for Alberta under the Wartime Prices and Trades Board. Last March he was appointed to take charge of the board's sub-regional office in Calgary.

For a period he was secretary-manager of the Golf and Country club.

Figures Reveal Auto Camp Has Splendid Year

Interes on the $70,000 bond issue of the A.M.A. auto camp which comes due on Dec. 1, 1942, has been paid, Charles H. Grant, K.C., president of the Edmonton Automobile and Good Roads Association, which owns the camp, announced Friday.

The bond was issued to construct additions to the camp several years ago when the officials felt that an upsurge in tourist traffic to Edmonton warranted expansion.

In reviewing the growth of the camp, Mr. Grant stated that it has grown to its present state from the efforts of a few South Side businessmen, who organized under the name of the South Side Businessmen's Association.

They interested the Alberta Motor Association in the project, and the first work was done by members of the association and the directors of the Alberta Motor Association actually handling the hammers and saws. The materials were furnished by contributions from the Motor Association and business men.

GROWTH IS FAST

From that small beginning all the money that has been earned by the camp has been put back into it, so that the camp has continually grown and now is able to handle a population equal to that of most small towns.

The record this year, notwithstanding the gasoline rationing and the shortage of tires, is a splendid one and the directors are very proud of it.

The director in charge of the Camp operations is Robert McKillop, and the Camp is operated by Stanley Taylor, and his wife. All the tourists have a good word to say for Mr. Taylor in his efficient operation and his readiness to serve, with a smile, all comers.

When asked about the suggested arrangements with the city for the construction of further accommodations, Mr. Grant stated that at present he had nothing to say on the subject excepting that the camp was built with a view to expansion and plans have existed from the first as to the manner in which the expansion would take place.
